In the Circuit Court of the United States for the Middle District of Tennessee, at Nashville, in said State.

At the April term, 1894, begun and held upon the third Monday of April in said year, present and presiding the honorable the judges of the said circuit court of the United States, and at subsequent terms thereunto, the following proceedings were had, to wit: On July 11th, 1894, during said April term, 1894, in the cause of—

THE MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST COMPANY, to the Use of J. J. PRYOR, Assignee, etc.,
vs.
THE GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA.

Upon its removal from the chancery court of Davidson county, State of Tennessee, to the above-styled court, the following transcript from said chancery court was filed, to wit:

STATE OF TENNESSEE,
Davidson County.

Original Bill. Filed April 19, 1894.

In Chancery, at Nashville, Tennessee.

MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK AND TRUST COMPANY
vs.
THE GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA et al.

To the Honorable Andrew Allison, chancellor, etc., holding the chancery court at Nashville, Tennessee:

2 The bill of complaint of The Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Company, a corporation chartered under the laws of the State of Tennessee, with its only office in Nashville, who sues to the use of James J. Pryor, assignee, vs. Union Bank & Trust Company, a corporation chartered under the laws of Tennessee, as administrator of John Schardt, and The Guarantee Company of North America, a foreign corporation chartered under the laws of the Dominion of Canada, with its chief office at Montreal and a branch office in Nashville, Tennessee, with Theo. Cooley, its local agent and manager.

Complainant shows that it is a corporation chartered under the laws of the State of Tennessee, as a savings bank & trust company, and as such has been doing business for several years.

That heretofore on the 17th day of April, 1893, it became insolvent, and was forced to close its doors, and ceased to do business, and it made a general assignment in trust to James J. Pryor, assignee, of all its assets, rights, credits and property of every kind for the equal pro rata benefits of all its creditors.

Complainant states that said Pryor has accepted said trust after giving bond and qualifying as such under and according to the laws of Tennessee, and is now engaged in winding up the affairs of said bank & trust company, and the same is wholly insolvent and cannot pay the debts of said bank in full.

Complainant would further show that said bank while in existence received deposits, loaned money, discounted all manner of commercial paper, and had in its employ officers and clerks, such as cashiers, tellers, and book-keepers as well as president.

Complainant alleges and shows that John Schardt was from the 16th day of January, 1888, to January 1st, 1893, its teller and collector. And said Schardt was its cashier from January 1st, 1893, to the time the bank closed its doors April 17th, 1893. That while he was filling said office of teller and performing the duties thereof, he was required to give bond and security to the bank to make good and reimburse it for all pecuniary losses sustained by the bank, by the fraudulent acts of said employé in connection with its said office and position, and other duties assigned him. And complainant says that said Guarantee Company of North America on the 16th day of January, 1888, gave its bond to complainant with 3 Schardt as principal, and it as surety in the sum of $10,000 to expire on the 16th day of January, 1889, for a consideration paid to it, and to effect a continuance of said bond for the ensuing year or years a like consideration was to be paid to it, which was done, and said consideration was paid on said bond continuous to the 16th day of January, 1893, for said John Schardt to make good and reimburse to said bank such pecuniary loss as it shall sustain by the fraudulent acts of said Schardt, in connection with its said office as teller and collector or with any other duties assigned to him by the bank in said service committed by him.

Complainant now shows to the court that after said bank made its assignment to said Pryor, assignee, expert book-keepers were employed to go over the books of the bank, and ascertain and report their condition, especially the books of said Schardt, as teller and collector and as cashier aforesaid. Said Schardt departed this life at or near the time said bank closed and the Union Bank and Trust Company became his executor and personal representative, and qualified as such according to law, and as such was requested to select a book-keeper, accountant and expert to examine said books and accounts in connection with two others, and the defendant, The Guarantee Company of North America was also requested to select another expert accountant and book-keeper to act with the others in said matter.

The personal representative of said Schardt did select a bookkeeper, who co-operated with the others, but the defendant, The Guarantee Company of North America refused to do so, and the said book-keepers, accountants and experts, after several weeks of labor reported that said Schardt while acting in the capacity of teller, collector, etc., had abstracted and fraudulently taken from said bank more than seventy thousand dollars, a large portion of which, say $50,856.77, he had abstracted and fraudulently taken during the year ending January 1st, 1893. So complainant charges that said Schardt during the currency of said bond by his fraudulent acts in connection with said office and position did take, embezzle and appropriate to his own use the sum of $78,956.11 with interest, and under the terms of said bond, defendant company, should reimburse said bank therefor; that said Schardt had no property out of which the same can be made, of all which facts complainant, heretofore on the 20th day of April, 1893, gave notice to said guarantee company, 4 and made proof thereof more than three months before bringing this suit and demanded payment thereof. And said company refuses to make any payment and denies its liability upon said bond.

Complainant further shows to the court that on January 1st, 1893, said Schardt was elected cashier of said bank, which office he filled to his death some time in April, 1893, that when he assumed said office said guarantee company for a consideration paid to it, executed and delivered its bond of that date to the complainant in the penal sum of $20,000, reciting that said Schardt had been appointed cashier of said bank, and had been required to furnish security that he shall not be guilty of any fraudulent act in the performance of his duties in the said capacity by which the said employer shall suffer any pecuniary loss, etc., agreed and did become security for said Schardt to the amount of any loss, not exceeding in the whole the sum of $20,000, which during the currency of said bond shall be sustained by the said employer by reason of any act of fraud committed by the said employé in connection with the duties of his said appointment and constituting embezzlement or larceny, such reimbursement to be made within three calendar months next after proof shall have been given to the satisfaction of the directors of said company of the loss.

Complainant now charges that said Schardt as such cashier and during the currency of said bond, did, as shown by the report of said experts, accountants and book-keepers and did in fact by act of fraud, committed by him in connection with the duties of his said office and constituting embezzlement or larceny, take of said bank and appropriate to his own use the sum of $22,817.30, without interest and for which complainant is entitled to reimbursement under the terms and conditions of said bond.

Complainant states that it did give notice and make the proofs of the facts to said guarantee company, and did all other things required of it, under the terms and conditions of each of said bonds, and did give said notice and make proofs of loss more than three calendar months before the suit was brought, and did make demand of payment according to the terms of said two bonds and the same was refused, said company claiming that it was not liable on said bond for any sum.

Complainant now files said two bonds as exhibits to this bill marked Exhibit "A" & "B," and makes them a part hereof, but not to be copied.

Complainant further shows to the court that said Schardt a few days before his death assigned to complainant certain insur-
5 ance policies upon his life as additional indemnity for the losses he had brought upon complainant by reason of his action aforesaid, to wit: A policy in the North Western Mutual Insurance Company for $10,000, which has been paid. A policy in the Ætna Insurance Company for $5,000, which has been paid. A policy in the New York Life Insurance Company for $5,000, which has been paid, making a total of $20,000, which has been paid. Also he assigned the following policies which have not been paid, viz: Penn Mutual Life for $10,000; Mutual Life of New York for $25,000; and the U. S. Life of New York for $25,000, which has not been paid. Suit has been instituted on the last three named bonds, and defendants have filed pleas alleging that said policies are void by reason of frauds and concealments and false answers in respect to his health and amount of insurance then outstanding upon his life, and deny all liability thereunder, how the same will end, of course complainant cannot foretell, but will prosecute the same to the end.

Complainant shows that said policies were accepted by it merely to be credited upon said bonds if collected. Twenty thousand dollars, as already stated has been collected, and sixty thousand remains uncollected. Said Schardt in making said assignments of said policies, knew his liability was very large to complainant, but did not know the amount thereof, nor did he give any order or direction in his said assignment as to which of said several bonds the moneys when collected should be applied, but made the assignment general to reimburse complainant for its losses by reason of his action as stated and complainant has applied the same in the order in which he embezzled the funds of the bank, that is to say, it has applied the first collection to the first embezzlement, and so on.

Complainant charges that he has taken, embezzled and appropriated under said several bonds as teller, etc., and cashier, the sum of $101,783.41 without interest being calculated thereon, and the whole of aforesaid policies do not exceed $80,000, and therefore if it can collect the whole of it it will still leave a large sum to be paid by the surety upon his several bonds.

Complainant further alleges that said defaults and embezzlement are made up of many hundreds if not thousands of items, is complicated, hidden and secreted, and is entirely too complex for a jury, or a court of law, and complainant files herewith a copy of the same as made out by said experts, book-keepers, — accountants as a correct statement of the same as it believes, and makes the same 6 Exhibit "X" hereto, and a part of this bill, and charges that said defendants are indebted to it with interest thereon until paid.

Complainant asks that the court allow it to appropriate any collection hereafter to be made, if any by said policies or otherwise in the order of the defaults and embezzlements.

Complainant also asks that the court give judgment or decrees against said parties for the full amounts of said two bonds; that it decree all necessary accounts, and make all necessary and proper interlocutory orders, and give it the proper and necessary and final decrees against each of defendants, such as the proof may show it entitled to.

And to this end it prays that process issue to said two parties named in the caption hereof making them defendants to this suit, and that they each be required to answer this bill, but not under oath, but under their respective seals, and it also prays all general and special relief.

EDWARD H. EAST, Solicitor.

The following bond was filed:

EXHIBIT "A" TO ORIGINAL BILL.

The Guarantee Company of North America.

Established 1872.

Head office, Montreal, Canada.

Bond No. 154,806. Amount, $20,000.

First premium up to Jan. 1, 1894, $100.

Annual premium payable January, $100.

Know all men by these presents: That John Schardt (hereinafter called the "said employé") and the Guarantee Company of North America (hereinafter called the "said company") are held and firmly bound unto Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, (hereinafter called the "said employer") in the sum of twenty thousand dollars, lawful money of the United States of America, to be paid to the said employer, his or their certain attorneys, executors, administrators, assigns, or successors, to which payment well and truly to be made, we and each of us do bind ourselves, respectively,
7 and our respective heirs, executors, administrators and successors, jointly and severally, firmly by these presents, sealed with our seals, and dated the first day of January, anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety-three.

Whereas the said employé has been appointed cashier at Nashville, Tennessee, in the service of the said employer and has been required to furnish security that he shall not be guilty of any fraudulent act in the performance of his duties in the said capacity, by which the said employer shall suffer pecuniary loss, and whereas the said company, in consideration of the sum of one hundred dollars, now therefore paid for the term expiring January 1, 1894, and for the purposes of the renewal of this contract the sum or premiums of one hundred dollars, hereafter to be therefor paid to the said company, on or before the first day of January, 1894, and a like payment for each and every succeeding term of one year, so long as the said company shall consent to receive it—hath agreed upon the terms, and subject to the provisos and conditions hereinafter contained and endorsed hereon, hereby to become such security to the said employer:

Now, therefore, this bond witnesseth, that the said employé for and on his own behalf and the said company fully relying on the truth of the statement and declaration contained in a certain document distinguished as employer's guarantee proposal No. 154,806, dated the 10th day of Jan., 1893, and signed Lewis T. Baxter, president on behalf of the said employer, and lodged with the said company at its office in Montreal, and on the strict performance and observance hereafter, by the said employer of the contract thereby created, do hereby, respectively, severally and jointly covenant with the said employer to reimburse unto the said employer or his or their representatives or assigns, the amount of any loss not exceeding in the whole the sum of twenty thousand dollars, which, during the currency of this bond, shall be sustained by the said employer by reason of any act of fraud committed by the said employé in connection with the duties of said appointment and constituting embezzlement or larceny—such reimbursement to be made within three calendar months next after proof shall have been given to the satisfaction of the directors of the said company, of the occurrence of such loss, and the proof thereof to include, if the company shall so require, an affidavit to be made or taken by the person, for the time being entitled to the benefit of this guarantee, to the effect that he hath been actually defrauded by the said employé, and that he suffers absolute and ultimate loss thereby to the full amount 8 claimed hereunder, and that the contract created as aforesaid, hath been fully performed and observed on the part of the said employer.

Provided always, that this bond and guarantee hereby granted or undertaken, shall be subject and liable to the terms and conditions hereupon endorsed.

And provided also, that this bond is granted upon the express understanding and agreement that if any other corporation, person or persons be or hereafter become security or surety for the said employé, in his employment as aforesaid (and concurrently with this bond), should any loss be occasioned to the said employer by the acts or defaults of the said employé, for which the said company is liable, under this bond, then the said employer shall be entitled only to demand from the said company, such proportion of the said loss as the amount guaranteed by this bond bears to the whole security.

And it is also specially agreed hereby between the said employé, the said employer, and the said company, that if the said employé shall become a defaulter under circumstances which may afford ground for the laying of a criminal information against him, the said employer may and shall immediately take such steps as may be necessary, and within his or their power, to cause the detention or arrest of the said employé, pending an investigation of the default, and the substantiation or otherwise of any criminal offense, he may be suspected of having committed and which may entail loss or damage to the said employer, whereby a claim is liable to be made under this bond, and the said employer shall also immediately, on such default, coming to his or their knowledge, notify the said company, and if required so to do by the said company, or its representative shall, at the cost of the said company, afford and render every information, evidence, aid and assistance, capable of being afforded by the said employer, either for the purpose of prosecuting, bringing to justice and convicting the said employé for any criminal offence which may be so substantiated, or for the purpose of enabling the said company to procure reimbursement by the said employé or by his estate, or moneys paid by or recoverable or claimed from the said company under this bond.

And provided, that the said company may upon giving one month's notice in writing to said employer, terminate this bond, in so far as concerns the acts or defaults of the said employé subsequent to the end of such month, remaining liable hereunder, for all acts covered by this bond, happening previous to such termination, and within the time specified in condition 6 hereof, for the space 9 of three months after the date of such notice, and in the event of the said company so terminating this bond, it shall refund to the said employer the proportion of the premium for the unexpired term of risk, but in case of premature termination of this contract by defalcation, the premium paid thereon shall be held to be fully earned and belong to the said company.

And the said employé doth hereby for himself, his heirs, executors and administrators, covenant and agree to and with the said company, that he will from time to time and at all times save, defend and keep harmless the said company from and against all loss and damage of whatsoever nature and kind, and from all legal and other costs and expenses, direct or incidental which the said company shall or may at any time sustain or be put to, whether before or after any legal proceedings by or against them and to recover under this bond and without notice to him thereof; or for or by reason or in consequence — the said company having entered into the present bond or guarantee.

And, lastly, should the said employé become a defaulter, and seek refuge in the Dominion of Canada, he hereby agrees to the enforcement against him of the laws of said Dominion as they may be now or hereafter enacted relative to the commission of injuries or offenses against a Canadian corporation.

In witness whereof the said John Schardt (the said employé) hath hereunto set his hand and seal; and the common seal of the said company and the signatures of the undersigned director and the secretary of the said company are hereunto likewise respectfully attached and affixed the day and year above written.

Employé, JOHN SCHARDT. [SEAL.]
Director, E. RAWLINGS. [SEAL.]

ROBERT KERR,
Act. Secretary.

Signed, sealed and delivered by the said employé in the presence of—

J. M. EATHERLY.
JOHN A. McEWEN.

Endorsed: The Guarantee Company of North America.

10 Terms and Conditions Referred to in the within Bond.

This bond is granted upon the following express conditions:

1. Any misstatement of a material fact, in the declaration within mentioned, or in any claim made under this bond, will render this bond void from the beginning.

2. That the said employer shall use all due and customary diligence in the supervision of said employé for the prevention of default, and to that end shall cause an inspection or audit of his accounts to be made at least once within twelve months, and if the said employer shall at any time during the currency of this bond, become aware of any act or default on the part of said employé which would constitute a claim hereunder, and shall continue said employé in his service without notification to the said company, the said company will not be responsible hereunder for any loss or default which may occur subsequent to said act or default of said employé.

3. That any written answers or statements made by or on behalf of said employer in regard to or in connection with the conduct, duties, accounts or methods of supervision of the said employé delivered to the company either prior to the issue of this bond, or to any renewal thereof, or at any time during its currency, shall be held to be a warranty thereof, and form a basis of this guarantee, or of its continuance.

4. That the said employé has not, to the knowledge or belief of said employer, been guilty of any serious dereliction of duty, or default in this or any other service, or that his habits have been such as to incur said employer's censure, previous to the issue of this bond.

5. The said employer shall, immediately, upon it becoming known to him or them, that the said employé has been guilty of any act entitling the said employer to claim under this bond, notify the said company, at its head office; and this bond shall become absolutely void, both as to existing and future liability of the said employer, shall neglect or omit, to so notify the said company.

6. This bond shall extend to cover only such losses as may have been incurred by reason of the fraud of the said employé, during the currency of this bond, and within twelve months previous to the notification to the said company of any default hereunder.

7. The liability of the said company hereunder of the said company shall cease three calendar months, from the expiry of 11 this bond, or from the death of said employé, or from the date of said employé leaving the service within mentioned, or if the said employé be allowed to engage in any description of employment other than that specified in the declaration before referred to, or to enter into business on his own account, without the sanction first obtained in writing from the said company.

8. That in addition to the supervision to be exercised by the said employer as mentioned in the statement and declaration within referred to, the said company shall be afforded every reasonable facility to examine from time to time as they may desire, for the purposes of this bond, the books, papers and affairs of the said employer entrusted to the keeping and charge of the said employé.

9. The annual premium payable upon this bond must be paid within thirty days from the day on which it first accrues, due, and if paid within such thirty days, the bond shall be good and valid; but if not so paid, then (subject to a discretionary power in the directors to remit the forfeiture) the bond shall be absolutely void and all liability cease thereunder.

10. In case this bond be or become subject to any trust, the receipt of the trustee for the time being for the money which may become payable thereon, shall, notwithstanding any equitable claim or demand whatever of the person or persons beneficially entitled thereto, be an effectual and final discharge of the said company.

11. Printed official receipts issued from the head office for renewal premiums will alone be admitted as valid.

12. No suit or proceeding at law, or in equity, or arbitration, shall be brought to recover any sum hereby incurred, unless the same be commenced within one year from the time the said company is first notified of default.

Endorsed: Dated January 1st, 1893. Amount, $20,000. Filed July 11th, 1894. H. M. Doak, clerk, by E. L. Doak, deputy clerk.

12 EXHIBIT "B," ORIGINAL BILL.

The following bond was filed:

U. S. banks.

The Guarantee Company of North America.

Head office, Montreal, Canada.

Bond No. 93525.

Amount, $10,000.00. Annual premium, $100.

This bond, made the sixteenth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight, between John Schardt, herein-ter called the "employé," of the first part, and the Guarantee Company of North America, hereinafter called the "company," of the second part, and the Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company (Nashville, Tennessee), hereinafter called the "employer," of the third part. Witnesseth:

Whereas, the employé has been appointed in the service of the said employer, and has been assigned to the office or position of teller and collector, by the said employer, and application has been made to the Guarantee Company of North America for the grant by them of this bond.

And whereas, the employer has delivered to the company a certain statement, and it being agreed and understood that such statement constitutes an essential part of the contract hereinafter expressed.

Now, therefore, in consideration of the sum of one hundred dollars lawful money of the United States of America, to the said company, as a premium for the term of twelve months, ending on the sixteenth day of January, 1889, at twelve o'clock, noon, and in order to effect a continuance of the currency of this bond, a like premium hereafter to be paid to the said company, on or before the sixteenth day of January in each year, as a premium for the ensuing year, so long as the said employer may wish to continue this bond, and the said company shall consent to receive said premiums, it is hereby agreed that the company shall, within three months after proof satisfactory to the directors, make good and reimburse to the employer such pecuniary loss as the employer shall have sustained by the fraudulent acts of the employé, in connection with the duties of his said office or position, or with any other duties assigned to him, by the employer in the said service, committed by him, and discovered during the continuance of this bond, and within six months from the employé's ceasing to be in the said service.

13 The following provisions are also to be observed and binding as a part of this bond:

The actual payment of the premium and its acceptance by this company either for the issue or renewal of this bond, is essential to its currency, and a condition precedent, to the right or claim hereunder.

That this bond is issued and renewed on the express understanding that the employé has not within the knowledge of the said employer at any former period either in this or other employment been guilty of any default or serious dereliction of duty.

That the employer shall observe or cause to be observed all due and customary supervision over the said employé for the prevention of default, and if the employer shall at any time, during the currency of this bond, condone any act or default, on the part of the employé, which would give the employer the right to claim hereunder, and shall continue the employé in his service, without notification to the company, the said company will not be responsible hereunto for any default which may occur subsequent to said act or default of said employé, so condoned.

That the employer shall at once notify the company, on his be coming aware of the said employé being engaged in speculation or gambling, or indulging in any disreputable or unlawful habits or pursuits.

That there shall be an inspection or audit of the accounts or books of the employé on behalf of the employer at least once in every twelve months from the date of this bond.

That the company shall be notified in writing of any act on the part of said employé, which may involve a loss for which the company is responsible hereunder to the employer, immediately or without unreasonable delay, after the occurrence of such act shall have come to the knowledge of the employer; and upon the making of such a claim, this bond shall wholly cease and determine as regards any liability, for any act of the employé committed subsequent to the making of such claim, and shall be surrendered to the company on the payment of all claims due hereunder.

That, if the employer shall, at any time hold, concurrently with this bond, any other bond or guarantee of security, from or on behalf of the employé, the employer shall be entitled in the event of loss, by default of the employé to claim hereunder only such proportion of the loss as the amount covered by this bond bears to such other securities.

14 That the company may cancel this bond at any time, by notifying the employer and refunding the premium paid less a pro rata part thereof for the time said bond shall have been in force; but said cancellation shall not affect or impair, the company's liability hereunder for any acts committed or discovered previous to such cancellation during the currency of this bond, and within three months after said cancellation.

That no suit or proceeding at law or in equity shall be brought to recover any sum hereby insured, unless the same is commenced within twelve months (365 days) from the time any claim hereunder shall have been first made.

That the company shall not in anywise be responsible to the employer under this bond to a greater extent than ten thousand dollars.

And it is also specially agreed hereby between the said employé, the said employer and the said company, that if the said employé shall become a defaulter under circumstances for which the said employer intends making claim upon the said company, the said employer may and shall at the cost of the said company, immediately cause the detention of the said employé pending an investigation of a default; and if the said employer shall also immediately on such default coming to his or their knowledge notify the said company, and if required so to do by the said company, or its representative shall, at the cost of the said company, afford and render every information, evidence, aid and assistance capable of being afforded by the said employer for the purpose of prosecuting the said employé, for any criminal offense, which may be substantiated, or for the purpose of enabling the said company to procure reimbursement by the said employé, or by his estate, or moneys paid by, or recoverable from the said company, under this bond, at any time either before or after paying any claim made on the said company under this bond. And if after any such arrest or detention of the said employé based upon any default he may have committed, should be made, and upon investigation, no criminal act shall be substantiated, the said employé hereby waives any right of action against the said employer or the said company, for any damages arising from such arrest or detention.

And the said employé doth hereby for himself, his heirs, executors and administrators, covenants and agrees to and with the said company, that he will save, defend and keep harmless the said company from and against all loss and damage of whatever nature and kind, and from all legal, and other costs and expenses, direct or incidental, which the said company shall or may at any time sustain or be put to, whether before or after any legal proceedings by or against him, to recover under this bond, and without notice to him thereof or for, or by reason or in consequence, of the said company, having entered into the present bond, and in any suit or proceedings by the said company, or by the said employer on their behalf, to recover any sum of money, from the said employer, or from his estate, the amount which the said employer shall have claimed under this bond, shall until controverted by sufficient proof, be held to be the amount of claim as against the said employé, and due by him to the said company.

And lastly, should the said employee, seek refuge in the Dominion of Canada, after having become a defaulter, under this bond, he hereby agrees to the enforcement against him, of the laws of said Dominion, as they now — or may be hereafter enacted, relative to the commission of injuries, or offenses, against a Canadian corporation.

In witness whereof, the said John Schardt, (the said employé) hath hereunto set his hand and seal, and the said company hath caused this bond to be signed by one of its directors, and by its secretary, and its seal to be hereunto affixed, this sixteenth day of January, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-eight.

JOHN SCHARDT, Employé.
E. RAWLINGS, Director.
[SEAL.] ROBERT KERR,
Act. Secretary.

This bond, with conditions and provisions, is hereby accepted and the contract effected, thereby acknowledged.

C. W. PEDEN, Employer.

Endorsed: Filed July 11, 1894. H. M. Doak, clerk, by E. L Doak, deputy clerk.

25 Answer.

The separate answer of the Guarantee Company of North Americ to the bill of complaint filed against it and another by the Me chanics' Savings Bank & Trust Company, for the use of J. J Pryor, assignee, in the chancery court at Nashville, Tennessee and removed upon petition to this honorable court.

Respondent for and to so much and such parts of said bill, as it i advised is material for it to answer, answering says:

(1.) Respondent admits that the Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trus

Company is a corporation chartered under the laws of the State of Tennessee as a savings bank and trust company, and has been doing business for several years. It admits that upon April 17th 1893, said corporation became embarrassed, closed its doors, ceased to do business, and made a general assignment to James J. Pryor for the equal benefit of all its creditors. It admits that said Pryor has accepted the trust, qualified as assignee, and is now engaged in closing up its affairs. It is also admitted that the bank while in operation received deposits, loaned money, discounted paper and had officers, clerks, cashiers, tellers, and book-keepers, as well as a president.

(2.) Respondent admits that John Schardt was the teller of said bank from the 16th day of January, 1888, to the first of January, 1893, and was cashier of said bank from January 1st, 1893, to April 17th, 1893.

(3.) Respondent admits that on the 16th day of January, 1888, it executed a bond to the bank with Schardt as principal and it as surety in the sum of $10,000, to expire January 16th, 1889, unless continued, and that upon paying proper considerations, and the making of certain important and material representations, said bond was continued in force to January 16th, 1893, but the bond itself is referred to for its terms, conditions and limitations.

(4.) Respondent admits that after said bank made its assignment to said Pryor, its affairs were examined, and it was discovered that said Schardt had abstracted from said bank a large amount of its money, a part of which was abstracted in the year 1890, a part in 1891 and a part in 1892 and a part in 1893, but respondent does not admit that the amounts embezzled in each year are correctly stated in the bill.

(5.) Respondent admits that prior to the death of said Schardt he assigned to the bank certain insurance policies upon his life
26 for the purpose of paying off and discharging all of his indebtedness to said bank, but just what insurance and what amounts he assigned respondent is unable to state because it does not know.

Respondent admits that a large amount of said insurance money has been collected, and that a large amount is now in litigation, and respondent concedes the right of complainant to apply the moneys received from said insurance to the indebtedness of said Schardt in the way it has been done; that is, the first money received has been applied to the first money abstracted from the bank by said Schardt; and respondent avers that there will be collected from said insurance policies more than a sufficient amount to pay off and discharge all the money abstracted by said Schardt prior to January 1st, 1893.

First. Respondent denies any liability under the teller's bond, for the following reasons, among others:

(1.) Respondent avers that while said bond insured the bank against loss on account of the fraudulent acts of said Schardt as teller and collector, and while respondent only agreed to bond said Schardt as teller and collector, yet he was permitted to perform the duties of general book-keeper in addition to his duties as teller and collector, and it was by reason alone of these extra and additional duties being imposed upon him that he was enabled to and did embezzle the bank's funds, and continued to do so through a long period of time; and but for the bank imposing these additional duties on said Schardt he would not and could not have embezzled its funds.

And respondent did not guarantee Schardt to said bank in the capacity of general book-keeper, nor in the dual capacities of "teller and collector" and "general book-keeper," nor in any other capacity than as teller and collector, and respondent is therefore not liable to the bank under its said bond for any fraudulent act of said Schardt in connection with his duties as teller and collector and general book-keeper, and respondent denies that said Schardt caused said bank any loss whatever, prior to January 1st, 1893, except such loss as accrued while he acted in such dual capacity as teller and collector and general book-keeper, and denies that said Schardt caused the bank any loss by any fraudulent act in connection with his duties as teller and collector solely.

(2.) Respondent avers that the shortage during 1890 and 1891 has been fully paid and discharged by the insurance money re-
27 ceived by the complainant, and it is not liable for any shortage during the year 1892 or the year 1891 (even though the shortage for the year 1891 had not been thus made good), because said bank procured said bond to be continued in force from and after January 16th, 1889, from year to year thereafter, by stating to respondent annually in each year, that the accounts of said Schardt had been examined and verified and were correct, and relying upon the truth of such statements which were warranties, and without which said bond would not have been continued in force, respondent continued said bond in force; whereas, the statements so made in each year were false and fraudulent, and as ascertained by respondent since this claim was made, no examination of said accounts had ever been made as represented, and the same had never been verified, and never found correct, but on the contrary a large shortage existed in said accounts at the time each of said statements were made in 1891 and 1892; and had such examination and verification been so made as represented, said shortage would have been at once discovered, and said bond would not have been continued in force by respondent.

And respondent also avers that said bond was issued upon the faith of the representations and agreements by the bank amounting to the warranty thereof, that the cash of said Schardt as teller would be checked and counted quarterly by the finance committee of the bank, and which by the terms of said bond was required to be done, but which, as respondent has ascertained since the making of this claim, was not done, or, if done, was so negligently and inefficiently done as to be worthless, and for which reason respondent denies any liability under said bond.

(3.) Respondent further avers that said bond provided that immediate notice should be given to respondent of any gambling or speculating on the part of said Schardt, and avers that during the continuance of said bond the officers of said bank became aware of the fact that said Schardt was not only speculating himself, but was interested in a concern in which speculation was the sole business; and said officers of said bank, notwithstanding that they specially censured Schardt for such conduct, not only did not notify respondent thereof, but concealed the same from it.

(4.) On or about January 1st, 1893, complainant represented and stated to respondent that it had examined and verified the accounts of said Schardt as teller and collector and found the same to 28 be correct, and respondent was not notified prior to January 16th, 1893, that there was any shortage whatever, nor was it so notified until the latter part of April, 1893, and more than ninety days after the employé, the said Schardt, had ceased to be in the service of said bank as teller and collector, and more than ninety days after said bond on Schardt as teller and collector had expired, nor was the shortage discovered during the continuance of the currency of said bond or respondent notified thereof, as required by the bond, and it pleads these facts in bar of any right of action against it on account of said teller's bond.

Respondent for further answer says that the complainant did not make a proper inspection or audit of the books and accounts of said Schardt once each year as required by said bond, and this condition of the teller's bond was breached by the complainant.

The complainant did not use the proper and customary diligence in the prevention of a default while said teller's bond was in force, and this condition of said bond was breached by the complainant.

Second. Respondent denies any liability under said cashier's bond for these reasons, among others:

(1.) Said bank made application to respondent for a bond on said Schardt as cashier on or about January 1st, 1893, and in order to secure said bond from respondent, it falsely and fraudulently represented to respondent, among other things, that the accounts of said Schardt as teller had been examined and verified, and that his conduct had at all times been satisfactory, while in fact said Schardt had at that time embezzled from the bank nearly twice the amount of its entire capital which fact was known, or could with slight investigation have been known to the officers of said bank, and which facts were material to be known, and respondent relied upon said statements, and they formed the basis of the issue of the bond, which would not have been executed but for such statements and warranties. Respondent did not know these facts and they were not such facts as could have been known to any one except the officers of said bank.

(2.) The officers of said bank concealed from respondent the fact that said Schardt had been speculating, which fact was unknown to respondent, and the bond was issued upon said Schardt as cashier upon the express condition that he had not been guilty of any serious dereliction of duty, and that his habits had been such as not to incur the censure of said bank, while in fact said Schardt had not only been derelict in his duties, but his habits in respect to 29 gambling or speculating had been such as not only to justify, but to actually receive the severe censure of the officials of said bond, and this too, before said bond was applied for or issued; these facts were not stated to respondent but concealed from it, and but for such concealment respondent would not have issued said bond.

(3.) Respondent further avers that also said bank in making application for said bond upon said Schardt as cashier, stated that he would perform the duties of cashier only, and the bond was so executed, yet said bank at the time knew and expected said Schardt to perform the duties of general book-keeper, and thereafter did permit him to perform such duties in addition to his duties as cashier, and it was only by reason of the fact that he was permitted to perform these additional duties in connection with his duties as cashier, that he was enabled to embezzle the funds of the bank, and for this reason respondent denies all liability upon said bond, and avers that it would not have entered into said bond but for the representations of said bank that said Schardt would not be permitted or expected to perform the duties other than those of cashier.

(4.) Respondent further avers that in the application for the issuance of said cashier's bond, said bank caused its president to certify to respondent that no former cashier of said bank had ever been short in his accounts, when in fact a former cashier had been short in his accounts, which fact was well known by the officers of said bank, and concealed from respondent.

All statements and certifications made by the bank to respondent in connection with the teller and collector's bond, were intended to be and were in fact warranties, and they were made for the purpose of securing and continuing in force the said bond; and the answers and representations in the application made by the said bank to respondent for the issue of the bond on said Schardt, as cashier, were also warranties and likewise made for the purpose of securing said cashier's bond.

Respondent avers that the action of said bank and the false and fraudulent statements made to respondent by it with respect to continuing in force said teller's bond has released respondent from liability, and the false and fraudulent statements, the concealment of material facts with respect to said cashier's bond, and the additional opportunities afforded said Schardt to defraud the bank by performing the duties of general book-keeper has released respondent for all liability thereunder.

30 And respondent further answering, avers that the officers and directors of the complainant bank misrepresented to it the financial condition of said bank, and from time to time, beginning in the year 1888 down to the time said bank ceased to do business, it represented to respondent and published to the world financial statements of its condition, which were false and known to be false when so made and published.

Respondent avers that it relied upon said statements and misrepresentations, and the same were material to be known, and it would not have continued in force said teller's bond, nor issued said cashier's bond, but for such statements being made to it and published as aforesaid.

Respondent avers that it executed both said bonds in good faith for the purposes therein expressed, but it is advised that the bank also had duties to perform with respect to each of said bonds and respondent's rights therein; and respondent avers that since the bank has failed to perform its duties under and with respect to each of said bonds, therefore it has no right in equity or good morals to compel payment for losses occasioned through its own neglect and wrongs.

The statements, representations and warranties of the bank to respondent were accepted in good faith and acted upon; respondent was wholly ignorant of the true facts and could not have discovered them except through the bank, since such facts were peculiarly within the keeping of the bank.

Respondent is advised that the bank is entitled to recover the premium paid for the cashier's bond, which is $100.00, and which has heretofore, to wit, on December 28th, 1893, been tendered to the complainant and refused; and respondent stands ready to make good said tender as directed by the court, and to pay such other amounts on account of premiums received by it as may be just.

Respondent denies all allegations in the bill not admitted to be true, and having fully answered, prays to be hence dismissed with its reasonable costs.

In the Chancery Court of Davidson County, Tennessee.

MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK AND TRUST COMPANY, Use of JAMES J. PRYOR, Assignee, vs.
UNION BANK AND TRUST COMPANY and GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA.

Petition for the removal of this cause to the United States circuit court for the middle district of Tennessee.

To the honorable chancery court of Davidson county, State of Tennessee:

Your petitioner, The Guarantee Company of North America, respectfully shows that it is one of the defendants in the above-entitled suit, and that the matter and amount in dispute in the above suit, exceeds exclusive of interest and costs, the sum or value of $2,000.00.

Your petitioner further shows that the said suit is of a civil nature, and that there is in said suit a controversy which is wholly 33 between citizens of different States, and which can be fully determined as between them, to wit, a controversy between your petitioner which avers that it was at the time of the bringing of this suit, and still is a citizen of the province of Quebec in the Dominion of Canada, and the said complainants, The Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, and Jas. J. Pryor, its assignee, which, as your petitioner avers were then and still are citizens of the State of Tennessee, that the said controversy is of the following nature, to wit, whether or not your petitioner which is in the business of issuing bonds of suretyship, is liable to the Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, or its assignee, James J. Pryor, on two certain bonds of suretyship issued by your petitioner to the said Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, guaranteeing the fidelity of John Schardt, as teller and cashier of said Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, and that your petitioner and the said complainants are both actually interested in said controversy.

Your petitioner avers that said Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company was and is a corporation chartered and organized under the laws of the State of Tennessee, that its codefendant, The Union Bank and Trust Company, administrator of John Schardt, is a corporation chartered and organized under the laws of the State of Tennessee, and having its principal and only office in the city of Nashville, and said State, and that your petitioner, The Guarantee Company of North America is a corporation chartered and organized under the laws of the Dominion of Canada, and that it has never been chartered under the laws of the State of Tennessee.

And your petitioner offers herewith a bond with good and sufficient security for its entering in said circuit court of the United States on or before the first day of the next session, a copy of the record in this suit, and for paying all costs that may be awarded by said circuit court, if the said court shall hold that this suit was wrongfully or improperly removed thereto.

And your petitioner prays this honorable court to proceed no further herein, except to make the order or removal required by law, and to accept the said surety and bond, and to cause the record herein to be removed into said surety and bond, and to cause the record herein to be removed into said circuit court of the United States in and for the middle district of Tennessee.

And your petitioner will ever pray.

GRANBERRY & MARKS,
Solicitors for Petitioner.

34 STATE OF TENNESSEE, }
Davidson County. }

I, Albert D. Marks, being duly sworn, do say that I am a member of the firm of Granberry & Marks, the solicitors for the petitioner in the above-entitled cause, that I have read the foregoing petition and know the contents thereof, and that the statements and allegations therein contained are true, as I verily believe.

ALBERT D. MARKS.

Subscribed by the said Albert D. Marks in my presence, and by him sworn to before me June 7, 1894.

[SEAL.] ALBERT M. COLYAR,
Notary Public.

Bond. Filed June 11, 1894.

Know all men by these presents that the undersigned, The Guarantee Company of North America, as principal, and Granberry & Marks, as sureties, are held and firmly bound unto The Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company for the use of James J. Pryor, assignee, in the penal sum of $500.00 for the payment thereof well and truly to be made unto the said Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company for the use of James J. Pryor, assignee, their heirs and assigns, we bind ourselves, our heirs, representatives and assigns jointly and severally, firmly by these presents.

Yet upon these conditions the said Guarantee Company of North America having petitioned the chancery court of Davidson county, State of Tennessee, for the removal of a certain cause, therein pending wherein The Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company for the use of James J. Pryor, assignee, is plaintiff, and The Union Bank and Trust Company, as administrator of John Schardt, and the undersigned, The Guarantee Company of North America, are defendants, to the circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee:

Now, if the said Guarantee Company of North America should enter into said circuit court of the United States on or before the first day of its next session, a copy of the record in said suit, and shall well and truly pay all costs that may be awarded by said circuit court of the United States, if said court shall hold that 35 said suit was wrongfully or improperly removed thereto, then this obligation to be void, otherwise in full force and effect.

Witness our hands this 7th day of June, 1894.

Decree of June 11, 1894.

MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK AND TRUST COMPANY, to the Use of JAMES J. PRYOR, Assignee, vs.
UNION BANK & TRUST COMPANY, Administrator of John Schardt, and THE GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA.

In this cause commenced in this court, wherein The Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, and Jas. J. Pryor, were complainants, and The Guarantee Company of North America, a citizen of the province of Quebec, in the Dominion of Canada, was one of the defendants, it appearing that the said Guarantee Company of North America has duly filed in this court its petition for removal of this cause into the circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee, and filed with the said petition the bond with surety required by the act of Congress of March 3, 1875, entitled "An act to determine the jurisdiction of the circuit court- of the United States, and to regulate the removal of causes from the State court- and for other purposes," and by the act of March 3, 1887, amendatory of the said last-named act.

It is therefore ordered that the clerk and master of this court forthwith certify to the said circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee a full and complete copy of the record and proceedings in this cause, and that this cause proceed no further in this cause.

36 STATE OF TENNESSEE, }

Clerk and Master,
By J. R. WEST, Deputy C. & M.

Endorsed: Filed — U. S. circuit court, July 11, 1894. H. M. Doak, clerk, by E. L. Doak, deputy clerk.

Deposition of Samuel D. F. McEwen, taken July 17, 1894, by consent of complainant and defendant, in the case of Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Co. vs. Guarantee Company of North America, now pending in the Federal court for the middle district of Tennessee.

Examined by complainant:

Q. 1. State your name, age, residence and occupation.

A. My name is Samuel D. F. McEwen; residence, Nashville, Tennessee; age, 44 years; insurance agent and book-keeper.

Q. 2. Please state whether at any time recently you were employed by the assignee of the Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Co. as book-keeper to go through the accounts of John Schardt as teller and cashier of said bank, and whether you did so, and by whom you were assisted, and what you did, and the result thereof.

A. I was employed by the assignee of the Mechanics' Sav-
37 ings Bank and Trust Co., after he took charge of the books and assets of said bank, for the purpose of examining the books of said bank during the term of office of John Schardt as cashier and teller of said bank. I was assisted by Prof. R. W. Jennings, Allen B. Fisher, and part of the time by Wallace Norther, Mr. Fisher being employed by Mrs. John Schardt, and Mr. Norther was employed to represent the Union Bank & Trust Co., the administrator of John Schardt, deceased, with will annexed. We continued our labors for several months, commencing the shortage account with date of September 12, 1890, and bringing it up to the 17th day of April, 1893, the day the bank assigned, with the following results, as shown in Exhibit "X" to the original bill which is made a part hereof.

Q. 3. Take up said Exhibit "X" and state for what amounts said Schardt was defaulter separately as teller and cashier, and the aggregate of the two with and without interest from the date of the defaults, and also with reference to the years and the dates of his respective offices.

A. John Schardt, deceased, was made teller and collector of said bank on January 16, 1888, which is the date of his bond as sued on as such teller and collector, and continued to fill said office until he was made cashier of said bank January 1, 1893. Therefore he filled the office of teller and collector under his original and renewal bonds from January 16, 1888, to January 1, 1893, and he filled the office of cashier from January 1, 1893, to the date of his death, on the 17th day of April, 1893.

As teller and collector from September 12, 1890, to January 1, 1893, he defaulted for the sum of.....	$78,819 24
Int.....	5,275 39
	$84,094 63
Subdivided as follows:
From Sept. 1, 1890, to Jan. 16, 1891.....	$5,879 34
Int.....	890 04
	$6,769 38
From Jan. 16, 1891, to Jan. 1, 1892.....	$22,290 00
Int.....	2,299 08
	$24,589 08
From Jan. 1, 1892, to Jan. 1, 1893.....	$50,649 90
Int.....	2,086 27
	$52,736 17
38 As cashier:
From Jan. 16, 1893, to date of death.....	$22,964 17
Int.....	164 52
	$23,128 69

Q. 4. Please state what was the character of these defaults and of what did they consist, as respects detention?

A. They were extractions from the funds of the bank made by Schardt, as were evidenced by the books kept by him, and covered on the books kept by him from detection by false additions, and by failure to enter notes and moneys collected by him on books, and also failure to give proper credit to depositors of correct amounts of their deposits, also of failure to credit on the books of the bank interest on notes collected by him belonging to the bank.

Q. 5. Please state whether these abstractions or embezzlements were easily or readily detectable from the books of the bank and what had to be done to detect the falsity of the books?

A. The errors could have been easily detected by an expert book-keeper. His falsifying of the books was done in the main in false additions on his cash book, and whenever this was done he nearly always falsified the general account of "individual depositors" on his general ledger, to correspond with the error made on the cash book. A few of his false additions on his cash book were covered up by falsifying one or more of his other accounts on his general ledger. The amount shown as due individual depositors by the account on the general ledger, was far less than that actually shown to be due by the pass books of said depositors.

Q. 6. Did you know or learn to know the handwriting and figures of Schardt, if so, was it in his handwriting and figures, which showed that it was Schardt who tampered with and falsified the books?

A. I had seen Mr. Schardt's figures before I commenced my work in the bank, and learned to know them well while there and all of the false additions were made in his figures, and also the falsifying of the general accounts were in his figures.

Q. 7. How long were the book-keeper and you engaged in ascertaining these abstractions?

A. Several months.

Q. 8. What is the character of the gentleman who was associated with you in this matter, as book-keeper?

39 A. They stand high in the community as expert accountants.

Q. 9. In order to ascertain the facts of embezzlements of the funds of the bank, was it necessary to refer to various and different books?

A. It was.

Q. 10. Please state if you have called in all pass books and examined the same, and whether the entries in said pass books during the time Schardt was teller were in his handwriting?

A. When he failed to give proper credits to depositors on the individual ledger, the entries on the pass books were in his figures.

Q. 11. Please state if there were entries in pass books for which no ticket could be found?

A. Yes, there were.

Q. 12. Please state whether the amounts as stated above by you were taken from the funds of the bank.

A. These amounts mentioned were abstracted by John Schardt. I presume they belonged to the bank.

Q. 13. Please state whether Schardt is dead, if so, when did he die?

A. John Schardt is dead. He died in April, 1893.

Q. 14. Please state what books the cashier or teller of State banks keep and make entries in.

A. I don't know what books they are required to keep, but Mr. Schardt kept the cash book and made ou- the daily balance book in the Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co., both while he was teller and collector and cashier of said bank.

Cross-examination:

Q. 1. When were you first employed to examine into the affairs of the bank, by whom and what instructions were given you?

A. I was employed by Mr. Eatherly, the president, April 15th, 1893, went on the morning of that day between 8 and 8.30 o'clock. I was told by the president that the books had not been examined (by an expert book-keeper) for some time although they had changed offices once or twice, and while they did not believe there was anything wrong, yet they wished to have the books verified by a disinterested man.

Q. 2. How long were you engaged in examining the affairs of the bank?

A. Several months after the assignment.

Q. 3. Are you now able to speak with accuracy with reference to the books *b*ept by the bank; that is, its methods of keeping its books from 1890 to the time it closed?

A. I am.

Q. 4. Please explain the methods of keeping the books, and what *k*ooks were kept?

A. The principal books kept by the bank were, individual ledger which showed in detail the deposit account of each individual depositor. This book was kept by a clerk who had no other duties and he was known as individual book-keeper, and the book kept by him was called the individual ledger. The teller, up to the time Schardt was elected cashier, kept three books. The first was a general ledger which is a book in which an account is opened of every account the bank has except the individual depositors. The accounts of demand loans, discounts, bonds and stocks and such like accounts are kept in this book; it also has an account showing in totals the depo-its made and checked out each day by individual depositors. This book was kept by Schardt from behind 1890 to the time the bank closed. Then there is another book, called the cash book, which shows the same thing as the general ledger, except that instead of putting the business of each day under various accounts, they are grouped together on one page in the cash book and shows at a glance the entire business transacted by the bank during the day. For example, take any day, the cash book will begin with the amount of cash on hand, and will be debited with all receipts of that day, showing from what source derived, and will be credited with all disbursements for the day, showing in detail on what account made. This cash book was also kept by Schardt from behind 1890 to the time the bank closed, and a sample page of the book is herewith filed as Exhibit No. 1 to this deposition, which is an exact copy of the business of the bank for January 31st, 1893. There was another book, called the daily balance book, and showed a summary of each account from the general ledger. At the close of each day's business, it showed the exact amount of discounts, demand loans, bills receivable, bonds and stocks, cash on hand and individual deposits, and I herewith file as Exhibits 2 and 3 two sample pages from the said book, which are exact copies of the pages from the book for January 30th and 31st, 1893. This book was kept by John Schardt from behind 1890 to April 14th, 1893. These four books were the principal books of the bank and they were all kept by John Schardt except the individual ledger and with that he had nothing to do.

41 Q. 5. When you went into the bank to examine it what method did you pursue, and how soon did you discover that there was a shortage?

A. The first thing that aroused my suspicion was when I looked at the cash book, I saw that the cash balance was on the wrong side of the cash book. What I mean by the cash balance being on the wrong side is, that instead of there appearing a cash balance of money on hand, it appeared that they lacked $466.00 of having anything, and I thereupon asked the teller, Mr. Boensch, if he had any money on hand and he opened the drawer and exhibited to me a considerable amount of money. I then called for the daily balance book, and saw from it they owed individual depositors less than $18,000. I then turned to the individual ledgers, and by 4 o'clock in the afternoon I had discovered that from their individual ledger from "A" to "L" they owed in the neighborhood of $55,000, and I then thought there was something radically wrong and so reported to the president.

Q. 6. What do you mean by individual ledger from "A" to "L"?

A. I mean all individual depositors whose names begin with either letter from A to L inclusive, have their accounts entered on that book, and all other individual depositors are entered on another book from M to Z.

Q. 7. Did I understand you to say that John Schardt performed the same duties with reference to keeping the books of the bank after he was elected cashier that he did while teller?

A. He did, so far as the books above referred to are concerned.

Q. 8. Why did you begin only at September, 1890, to check up the books?

A. Because that was the date up to which Prof. Jennings had made an examination, and all balances were correct up to that time and that was the starting point.

Q. 9. In question No. 5 of the direct examination you are asked to state what had to be done in order to detect the falsity of the books, and you do not appear to have answered that part of the question. Will you now do so?

A. If they had called for a detailed statement from the individual ledger and had compared that with the daily balance they would have seen something was wrong, just as I discovered it when I went in to examine the bank's books.

Q. 10. What do you mean by calling for a statement from the individual ledger?

42 A. I mean, called for each individual depositor's account and his balance.

Q. 11. Suppose they had asked the individual book-keeper for a trial balance from his book, by which I mean the total amount as shown on his book to be due individual depositors by the bank, would this not have at once shown the falsity of Schardt's books?

A. It would have shown that the amount due to their individual depositors on the individual ledger was far in excess of the amount shown to be due individual depositors upon the books kept by Schardt.

Q. 12. In examining the accounts of Schardt as teller, what method was there by which his accounts could have been verified?

A. They could upon any day at close of business, have taken the daily balance book, showing a record of the condition of the bank at that time and counted the notes on hand, bills receivable, bonds and stocks and cash, and could then have verified the amount appearing to be upon deposit in other banks to the credit of complainant bank, and this would have only left to be verified the amount shown to be due depositors, and the way to verify this would have been to have taken from the individual ledger a trial balance which would have shown the amount due depositors by the bank, and if this had agreed with the amount appearing upon the daily balance book to be due depositors, the officials of the bank would have verified his accounts as closely as would be possible.

Q. 13. How long would it have taken at any particular time to have secured from the individual ledger a trial balance of the amount due depositors?

A. It ought not to, in a bank of that size, take over twelve hours.

Q. 14. What proportion of the shortage was covered by misstating the amount due depositors upon the books kept by Schardt?

A. Nearly all of it.

Q. 15. Please furnish statement marked Exhibit 4, showing in detail the amount embezzled in each particular year, and each method.

A. (See Exhibit "4" filed herewith.)

Q. 16. Did the fact that Schardt was permitted to keep the general ledger and act as general book-keeper in the bank, greatly increase his facilities for embezzling the funds of the bank?

A. Certainly it did.

Q. 17. You speak of there being two individual ledgers.

43 When did they begin to have two and were they kept by one person?

A. I do not know when they commenced to have two, but they were kept by one man.

Q. 18. In answer to question No. 12 you have explained one way in which the accounts of Schardt could have been verified by the officers of the bank. Please state in what other ways, if any, such verification could have been made.

A. I do not know of any other way.

Q. 19. What experience have you had in book-keeping and state whether or not you consider yourself an expert on that line of work, and are you so considered by others?

A. I have kept books for twenty-five years and I consider myself an expert, and am so considered by others.

Q. 20. Would it have been possible for Schardt to have embezzled funds of the bank to any extent without detection, if he had not been permitted to keep the general ledger?

A. It would not have been possible for him to embezzle the funds in the manner he did, if he had not been permitted to keep the general ledger and balance book.

Q. 21. Did you discover in the bank a trial-balance book? I mean a book in which a trial balance from the individual ledgers were kept?

A. I saw a book of that character when I went in there, but it was incomplete, the balances not entered up and I paid no attention to it, and I do not know for what years they were taken off.

Q. 22. Are you familiar with the method of keeping books in State banking institutions such as this one?

A. Yes, I was for three years and a half in one of these banks and I think I am familiar with them.

Q. 23. If I understand you correctly an overwhelming part of the defalcations of Schardt was caused by misstatements on the books kept by him, as to amounts due individual depositors?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 24. Please state how Schardt manipulated the books of the bank kept by him?

A. His shortage was chiefly by abstractions from the cash, and these shortages were covered up by false additions on the cash book, and in order to make the daily balance book agree, which is Exhibits 2 and 3 to my deposition, he misstated on the daily 44 balance book the amount due individual depositors by the exact amount he had abstracted on that day.

Q. 25. Was the amount shown to be due individual depositors, the only account on his books which was falsified prior to January 1st, 1893?

A. That was the only one. There may have been other errors, which would run up to something like $500, but not enough to amount to anything.

Q. 26. Then as I understand you, beginning with the first shortage and continuing on down through the various times in which he was continuing to abstract money, he continued to understate the amount due individual depositors by the amounts he had abstracted at various times?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 27. Then at any time the amount he had abstracted added to the amount shown on his books to be due individual depositors would make the amount actually due individual depositors?

A. Yes, sir; in the main it would.

Q. 28. Referring to Exhibit "I" to your deposition, which is the cash book, please state whether the various accounts there shown were correctly entered upon that book during the time Schardt kept the same.

A. So far as I know they were properly entered upon that book.

Q. 29. Please state where the error was with reference to the cash book.

A. In posting from the cash book to the general ledger of this page on the cash book the amounts on the cash book were properly and correctly carried to the general ledger, but in taking the balances of the accounts on the general ledger, in order to make up his daily balance, he made an error in his addition in the individual depositors' accounts of the amount he had abstracted that day.

Q. 30. Then I understand there was no error or falsification of the cash book, except that whenever he stole an amount in one day, in adding up his cash book that day he would make an error in addition for the amount he had stolen?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 31. Then as I understand you, the various items on Exhibit "X" in which you state that the shortage is in adding cash book, do you mean to be understood as saying that on each of those dates, he made an error in addition on this cash book?

A. Yes, sir.

45 Q. 32. Were there any falsifications of the books to misstate the amounts of discounts and demand loans owned by the bank?

A. No, sir; there were no false entries.

Q. 33. Then if no notes were abstracted from the bank the amounts of discounts and demand loans would at all times have agreed with the amount shown to be on hand on the books kept by Schardt?

A. It would with the exception of clerical errors, which were liable to occur at any time.

Q. 34. In answers to questions Nos. 27, 29 and 30 of your cross-examination, do you mean to include all the shortage of Schardt?

A. No, I do not intend to include that part of the shortage occurring by Schardt having collected notes and not accounting for them on the books of the bank, and some few other items as fully appears upon Exhibit "X."

Q. 35. Please explain the method pursued by you in order to ascertain that Schardt had collected notes and not accounted for the proceeds.

A. The bank kept a book in which each note owned by the bank was entered and numbered, when the bank received it. And on this book was shown the date of the note, the makers, the collaterals, the date of maturity and the date it was paid. I begun in September, 1890, at the time Prof. Jennings' other examination ended, and I entered upon a new book each note which appeared by the bank's books to be owned by the bank of that date. I then marked on this book the date of payment, opposite each note owned by the bank, from that time down to the date the bank closed. I then went over the list again and checked off each note owned by the bank, and which was on hand at its failure.

This left certain notes on my book unpaid, and not on hand. I then went to the makers of the notes and found that they had been paid to Schardt and he had not accounted for same.

Q. 36. Could this information have been ascertained at any time after these notes were abstracted or paid, and unaccounted for as well as when you ascertained these facts?

A. Yes, sir; by such an examination as I made.

Q. 37. Then, if I understand you correctly, at any time after Schardt had collected a note and appropriated the money to his own use, if the amount of notes on hand had been counted, would they have agreed with the amount on his books shown to be on hand, less the amount of the notes he had abstracted?

46 A. Yes, sir.

Q. 38. Do I understand you to mean that at all times the amount of discounts and demand loans shown on the books kept by Schardt to be due the bank was correct?

A. Yes, sir; barring clerical errors.

Q. 39. Did you verify the entries on the books kept by Schardt with reference to amount of discount and demand loans to ascertain whether or not that book was correct in this regard?

A. Yes, sir; the book I made up agreed exactly with the books kept by Schardt.

Q. 40. Who collected the discount and demand loans of the bank?

A. The teller.

Q. 41. Who assisted you in making up this book and arriving at the amount of notes abstracted by Schardt?

A. Professor R. W. Jennings.

Q. 42. Was there any omission or error in the individual ledgers, or did they correctly show the deposits of each depositor up to January 1st, 1893?

A. The postings on the individual ledger in the main, were correct. There may have been a few errors, but not enough to amount to anything.

Q. 43. Please give a statement showing the amount of the discrepancy between the individual ledgers and the general ledgers or daily balance book on January 16th, 1891, and January 1st, 1892, and 1893; also the difference between the notes (demand loans and discounts) actually on hand in the bank, and the amount shown to be on hand by the daily balance book on the same days.

A. The individual ledgers, if a trial balance had been taken from them, would have shown on January 16, 1891, that there was due individual depositors $2,098.00 more than was shown to be due them by the daily balance book on the same date. And on January 1, 1892, there was a difference in the same way of $19,600.00. And on January 1, 1893, there was a difference in the same way of $69,700.00.

On January 16, 1891, there was on hand thirty-seven hundred and sixty-five and $\frac{44}{100}$ dollars ($3,765.44), in notes (represented in discounts on the daily balance book) less than is shown to have been on hand by the daily balance book of the same date.

There was no change in this amount on January 1, 1892, and on January 1, 1893, the difference was four thousand and fifteen dollars and $\frac{44}{100}$.

Deposition of R. W. Jennings, Taken by Complainant.

Q. 1. State your name, age, residence, and occupation?

A. R. W. Jennings; age, 56; Nashville; a business educator.

Q. 2. State if at any time you were employed by Jas. J. Prior, assignee of the complainant company, and if so for what purpose, by whom you were assisted and how much time was required?

A. I was employed by Jas. J. Prior, assignee, to examine the books and papers of the Mechanics' Saving Bank & Trust Co., to ascertain the condition of the account of Jno. Schardt, as teller and cashier of said bank. In this I was assisted by S. D. F. McEwen, W. W. Norther and A. B. Fisher. I was several months engaged in this.

Q. 3. Please state what was the result as discovered from the books of the bank?

A. I examined the books from September 9, 1890, to April, 1893, finding John Schardt's shortage during that time as teller and cashier, including interest, to be $107,182.12. Of this amount the following was as teller:

From September 12, '90, to January 16, '91	$5,879 34
Int.	890 04
		$6,769 38
From Jan. 16, '91, to Jan. 1, '92	22,290 00
Int.	2,299 08
		24,589 08
From Jan. 1, '92, to Jan. 1, '93	50,649 90
	2,086 27
		52,736 17
51 And as cashier:
From Jan. 1, '93, to April 17, '93	22,964 17
Int.	164 52
		23,128 69

Q. 4. From whom had the money been taken or abstracted?

A. From complainant bank.

Q. 5. Was the fact shown by books kept by Schardt, or which was under his care or keeping?

A. Yes.

Q. 6. Was it shown to be money taken or other valuables?

A. As money taken.

Q. 7. How was Schardt shown to be connected with the embezzlement?

A. The manipulations on the books were all shown to be in his handwriting.

Q. 8. Were you familiar with his handwriting?

A. I was for several years previous to his defalcation.

Q. 9. Have you read the deposition of S. D. F. McEwen? If so, state whether you concur in the statements made there, and especially in the exhibits thereto?

A. I have, and fully concur in said exhibits. They were the results of our examination.

Q. 10. Please state what were the kind and character of manipulations resorted to by Schardt, and its evident purpose?

A. False additions and his failure to enter properly moneys received for notes collected by him and moneys deposited in bank by some of its depositors as shown by his handwriting in their pass books.

Q. 11. Please state whether the embezzlements could have been detected and brought to light except by an expert book-keeper?

A. No person not an expert book-keeper could have found many of these manipulations, but it would not have been difficult for any one who could add columns to have seen some of these false additions which would have resulted in causing suspicion that some wrong was intended.

Q. 12. What was the matter with the Durr account as cashier?

A. As I now remember, the main trouble was that Durr was retaining a part of the commissions earned by the bank and appropriating same to his own use, instead of turning over the whole amount to the bank.

52 Cross-examination:

Q. 1. In direct question No. 9 you are asked whether or not you adopt the answers of S. D. F. McEwen; please state whether or not you mean to be understood as adopting also his cross-examination.

A. I do, with the following exceptions: In answer to cross-question No. 8, it is stated by him that we begun our examination in September, '90, because I had previously examined the books up to that day, and found all balances were correct up to that time. This is a mistake; I never examined Schardt's books, but I did examine about that time certain aspects of the bank's affairs with respect to the cashier, Mr. Durr. I don't remember ever having seen a trial balance book from the individual ledger in the bank. With these exceptions, I adopt the cross-examination.

Q. 2. Did you find the books of the bank with reference to the cashier to be correct at the time you examined them in September, '90?

A. I did not find any of the books of the bank false, for the reason the cashier did not keep the books, but I did not find the accounts of the cashier correct.

Q. 3. Then you do not know whether the books of the bank so far as Schardt is concerned, back of September, '90, are correct or not, do you?

A. I do not.

Q. 4. Would any page in the daily balance book, which is Exhibit 2 and 3 to McEwen's deposition, show each day the exact condition of the bank, its assets and liabilities, and what they consisted of?

A. It ought to show that fact if the books were not falsified.

Q. 5. In what respect did you find this book to be incorrect?

A. Particularly in the amount as shown due individual depositors. There were other errors in other accounts, but not to any material extent.

Q. 6. In examining the books kept by Schardt, whether the same was done by an expert, bank officer or committee, would they or not be compelled to start as a basis with Exhibit 2 and 3 to the deposition of McEwen?

A. They would necessarily have to start with some showing which purported to be correct, and then see that said showing came correctly from the books.

Q. 7. Did the books of the bank show at the end of each day's business the amount of notes discounted on hand and the amount of the demand loans?

A. It ought to show it.

53 Q. 8. What way could the amounts shown to be due individual depositors on the general ledger kept by Schardt, be verified?

A. By examining the individual ledger itself and ascertaining whether or not the aggregate due depositors by that ledger corresponded with the aggregate as shown on the general ledger.

Q. 9. How long would it take the book-keeper having the individual ledgers to foot up the total amount shown by his books to be due individual depositors in this bank?

A. Of course it depends upon the rapidity of the work of the book-keeper. I should think twenty-four or thirty-six hours would be sufficient for an average book-keeper to do that work.

Q. 10. Are you familiar with the system of bank examinations generally in use in banks such as this?

A. I am.

Q. 11. State whether or not it is customary for banks like this at frequent intervals to take a trial balance from the individual ledgers showing the amount due depositors.

A. It is.

R. W. JENNINGS.

Deposition of J. M. Eatherly, Taken by Judge E. H. East, on Behalf of the Complainant.

Q. 1. Please state, Mr. Eatherly, your age.

A. I am 66 years old.

Q. 2. State what has been your relations with the Mechanics' Saving Bank & Trust Company for several years past.

A. I was a director in the bank from its organization until its assignment.

Q. 3. Did you fill any other position?

A. For a considerable length of time I was on the finance committee, and for about twenty days I was president of the bank.

Q. 4. Please state what twenty days you were president.

A. I was elected on the 28th of March, 1893, and the bank assigned on the 17th of April.

Q. 5. Were you also a stockholder in the bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. To what extent?

A. I had originally $2,000 worth of stock in it. When the bank closed I had only $1,000.

Q. 7. Were all the directors stockholders in the bank?

54 A. Yes, sir.

Q. 8. During what time were you on the finance committee?

A. I was for several years and prior to my election as president.

Q. 9. State whether it was a State or National bank.

A. It was a State bank.

Q. 10. Was it a bank simply of deposit and discount?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 11. What was its capital stock?

A. $50,000.

Q. 12. Was it fully equipped with all officers?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 13. How many men constituted the directory?

A. My recollection is about seventeen.

Q. 14. What committees did you have?

A. We did not have any committees except the finance committee, except occasional special committees for certain purposes.

Q. 15. Were you intimately connected with the bank during the time John Schardt was cashier?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 16. Also while he was teller?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 17. Were you continually and daily at the bank?

A. Nearly every day.

Q. 18. State the habits of the finance committee with respect to going over the accounts and transactions of the executive officers—when they did it, how they did it.

A. The finance committee made quarterly examinations of the bank's condition—that is, every three months. Mr. Schardt would make out a list of the assets of the bank, and that list was taken charge of generally by myself and a portion of the finance committee—we hardly ever got them all there together—generally about three of them acted. We went to where the securities were kept and took them to the directors' room, or rear part of the bank and compared them with the amounts given on the list to see whether they corresponded. We examined the collaterals or evidences of them to see if they were there. We counted the cash on hand, and had generally a certificate from the banks where we deposited as to the amounts in those. We then compared the footings with the amount as shown on the daily balance-sheet or balance book to see whether they agreed with them. We found no discrepancies except in the cash on hand in a few instances. Generally there 55 was a discrepancy of a few dollars between the money on hand and the amount shown by the daily balance-sheet. Sometimes it was a deficit and sometimes a gain, but generally a deficit.

Q. 19. Was this custom of examination habitual and continuous?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 20. Had it been or not the habit of the bank to do these same things for many years during its existence?

A. Yes, sir; it had been the custom. In addition to this semi-annual reports were submitted to the directors by the cashier.

Q. 21. Was it the habit of the president or some one of the directory to be present in the bank at all times?

A. Yes, sir; it was rarely the case that there were not some of them there.

Q. 22. Did you see John Schardt just before his death, and if so how long before, and where did you see him, and under what circumstances?

A. I saw him on Saturday evening the 15th day of April, 1893, and he died on the 17th of April, 1893, and at the time I saw him he was very ill.

Q. 23. Who was with you at this interview?

A. I had two interviews with him on Saturday evening. Mr. J. B. Richardson was with me on the first interview.

Q. 24. Who is Mr. Richardson?

A. One of the directors.

Q. 25. Where did these interviews take place?

A. At Mr. Schardt's house in Nashville.

Q. 26. Was he or not in bed at the time?

A. He was.

Q. 27. Under a doctor?

A. I suppose he was.

Q. 28. What was the purpose of this interview?

A. We went there for the purpose of having an explanation as to a discrepancy we had found between the individual ledger, as far as had been examined, and the daily balance-sheet.

Q. 29. Now state all that was said on either side as you best remember it?

A. I think we were ushered into the sick-room by Mrs. Schardt and she retired and left Mr. Richardson and myself with Mr. Schardt, and after asking him how he was, etc., I told him that we had come out for the purpose of getting an explanation as to the discrepancies mentioned above. I told him we had found errors in his books. He said, "Mr. Eatherly, my books are correct." I told 56 him that I did not see how he could reconcile the the two things that we had found, the daily balance-sheet showing something less than $18,000 due depositors, while the individual ledger as far as had been examined by Mr. McEwan and

Mr. Richardson, showed about $55,000 due depositors. He reiterated that his books were absolutely correct. I said, "John, I cannot understand it that way." I was satisfied there was an error somewhere. I asked Mr. Richardson if he wanted to ask him any questions. He was silent a moment or two and said, "I don't know that I do." He then turned to Mr. Schardt and said: "John, I am bound to say to you that you are a defaulter." Mr. Schardt broke out into a cry, putting his hands over his face and said: "My God! it is true—too true." I said: "John, compose yourself; we have come here for facts and want facts." I then asked him how much was his default and he said about $40,000. I told him if the other individual ledger showed the same proportion of discrepancy that this one did that he was a defaulter to a much larger amount—I would say to not less than $60,000 or $70,000. He said "Mr. Eatherly, you are mistaken. It cannot be that much." I then asked him how he had lost it, and he said, "Speculating in New York, and you can get it all back." He said, "you," meaning the bank. I said, "No, John, we can do no such thing; the laws of New York legalize this sort of trading, and we cannot recover it in that way." I asked him who he had traded with there, and he told me three firms, but I remember only one of them—Hubbard, Price & Co. After I told him we could not get it from them he said, "I can secure it myself." One of us asked him how he could secure it. He said he had a lot of life insurance and some real estate and some notes. I asked him what real estate he had. He said he had a lot on McNairy street and a house and lot on Pine street, and he was willing to convey everything he had to secure this debt. I told him to remember that he had a wife and child to support. He said his wife would join him in anything he did. We then asked him as to the amount of his insurance, and he said he had $80,000 insurance. He said he was willing to transfer those policies to the bank. This was agreed upon by him and myself and Mr. Richardson. We then made preparations to leave, and I told him that I would send Mr. M. T. Bryan, the attorney for the bank, out after we went back to the bank. That ended the interview so far as I recollect it.

Q. 30. What was his condition mentally?

A. His mind seemed as clear as it ever was.

57 Q. 31. Did you go back with Mr. Bryan at a later hour in the day?

A. Mr. Bryan said he did not know where Mr. Schardt lived and asked me to go with him; I did so and was met at the door by John Schardt's brother, Augustus, who took us into the sick-room, and we told Mr. Schardt that we had come out to fix the transfer up. It was mentioned that it would be necessary to have a notary public and two or three names were mentioned, and I told Mr. Gus Schardt that if he would go for Mr. Waddey that I was satisfied that he would come. He went for Mr. Waddey and brought him there and in the meantime Mr. Bryan was drawing up the transfer of the insurance policies, the real estate and some notes of hand, and some stock—I think possibly in a patent-medicine company—and I think he transferred his Bank of Commerce stock. After this transfer was made Mr. Schardt got Mr. Bryan to write his will confirming to the fullest extent the transfer. Mr. Gus Schardt got out all of the papers and seemed to be aware of his brother's intention.

Q. 32. Did he execute these assignments?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 33. What has become of those policies?

A. Sixty thousand dollars of them are in suit; twenty thousand dollars has been paid to the assignee.

Q. 34. What became of the notes?

A. I understand they are in suit also.

Q. 35. What became of the deposit in the Bank of Commerce?

A. It is an insolvent institution.

Q. 36. The real estate?

A. It was conveyed to Mr. Richardson as trustee for the bank and that trust has not been wound up.

Q. 37. What steps has the bank taken to ascertain the amount of Mr. Schardt's default?

A. They employed expert book-keepers, together with the administrator, and you might say his family, who went through the books and ascertained the shortage.

Q. 38. What is the amount of default as reported?

A. About $103,000.

Q. 39. What effect has that had upon the bank?

A. It has caused it to be insolvent.

58 Cross-examination by W. L. GRANBERY, for defendant:

Q. 40. Were you ever connected with a bank institution before or since this one?

A. Only as a stockholder.

Q. 41. Were you present at each examination of the accounts of Schardt from January, '91, to the time the bank closed?

A. I think I was generally present.

Q. 42. But you are not able to state that you were present at each of them.

A. If there was any examination made when I was not there I don't know it.

Q. 43. How many members of the board of directors constituted the finance committee and were they all members of the board from 1890 until the time the bank closed?

A. The finance committee generally consisted of five members, the president being an ex officio member also. As far as I remember they were all directors.

Q. 44. You have stated that you generally had a statement from other banks where you kept deposits, in making these examinations do you mean to say that there were examinations had in which such statements were not procured from the other banks?

A. That is the only way we had to get at the money on hand and I have no recollection of any examinations being made in the absence of those statements.

Q. 45. Did you or not say that Schardt made out the list of ass belonging to the bank for the examination of the committee bo during the time he was teller and during the time he was cashie

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 46. Please examine the exhibits to the deposition of S. D. McEwen and state which one of the exhibits is taken from the bo which you compared or referred to in making your examinatio

A. Exhibit 2 is the book we examined and compared.

Q. 47. Who collected the demand loans and discounts for the ban

A. It was the teller's duty and he did it.

Q. 48. How did you examine the amount of discounts and mand loans owned by the bank?

A. We took them one by one and examined them.

Q. 49. Did you compare the total with the book from whi Exhibit 2 to McEwen's deposition is taken, or did you compa the amount of notes examined with the list furnished you Schardt?

59 A. The manner in which we did that was this: One me ber of the examining board would take the evidences of d to the bank and call out the amount; another member of the co mittee would check off on the list furnished by Schardt.

Q. 50. Were the totals added up?

A. Always. That I made my special duty.

Q. 51. Did the totals agree with the amount as shown to be d the bank on the list furnished by Schardt?

A. Yes, sir, with the exception of slight errors as before explain in the cash.

Q. 52. Was the total amount of discounts and demand loans co pared with the amount shown on the book from which Exhibit 2 taken?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 53. Then, if the experts who have testified in this case ha stated that Schardt abstracted something like $4,000 of notes or proceeds thereof, in the year 1890, and also that his books from wh Exhibit 2 to McEwen's deposition is taken, was not falsified in t respect, they do not correctly state the facts?

A. My understanding clearly is that the daily balance-sheet w subsequently falsified as shown by the expert examination to ma it agree with the other books.

A. 54. In making your examination as I understand you, y examined the assets of the bank and then the liabilities of the ba and thus arrived at the net amount the bank had, is this correct?

A. We examined no book except the daily balance-sheet, w which we compared the reports as made out by Schardt.

Q. 55. In what way could you tell that the amounts reported Schardt were correct?

A. We only had his word for it and the reports that he made us and the exhibit on the daily balance book.

Q. 56. Then you relied upon the statements made to your co mittee by Schardt, without making or having made a thorou examination of the books?

A. Yes, sir, we relied upon Mr. Schardt and did not make an examination of any book except the daily balance-sheet.

Q. 57. The daily balance book of which Exhibit 2 to McEwen's deposition is taken, shows the amount due individual depositors, each day does it not?

A. It should show it at the close of business every day.

60 Q. 58. In what way did you verify this statement on that book?

A. The statement he made was on a separate sheet of paper from the daily balance-sheet and as I have stated before, after footing up his list, looking at the evidences of debt, comparing the two, then we compared that list with the daily balance-sheet to see whether or not they agreed.

Q. 59. You mean that you compared it with the sheet in the actual book or by a sheet furnished you by Schardt?

A. We compared the amount of the footings of these examinations with the book itself.

Q. 60. In what way did you verify the statement on the book kept by Schardt which should have shown and purported to show the amount due individual depositors?

A. We made no verification of it only in the manner in which I have stated.

Q. 61. Have you stated any manner in which you verified this particular account?

A. We took his word for it, which we had to do or go into an examination of all the books.

Q. 62. Was it not a custom in the bank as late as July, 1890, for the finance committee to have the individual book-keeper to furnish at intervals a trial balance from his books, which were compared with the amount on the daily balance book kept by Schardt?

A. I don't remember of this having been done.

Q. 63. I mean this: Was not the total amount shown to be due individual depositors on the individual ledgers, taken off at stated intervals which were called trial balances?

A. I did not understand it as trial balances. Mr. Schardt reported from time to time the amount due the depositors, but this account was falsified as his other books were.

Q. 64. Did Mr. Schardt keep the individual ledgers from the time he was teller?

A. Mr. Boensch was there, and my impression is that Mr. Schardt kept one of them and Mr. Boensch kept the other until Mr. McDowell came in. I find on examination, before signing this deposition that they were kept mostly by Mr. Boensch.

Q. 65. Did you ever request the individual book-keeper to furnish your committee with the total amount shown on the individual ledgers to be due depositors?

A. Personally, I did not.

Q. 66. Did the finance committee?

61 A. I have no knowledge of it.

Q. 67. It is a fact is it not that if the finance committee had at any time after the shortage commenced, procured from the individual book-keeper the total amount shown by his books to be due individual depositors and have compared it with the amount shown on the daily balance book kept by Schardt to be due individual depositors, would this not have at once disclosed the fact that something was wrong with the books?

A. I think it would, if the books had been kept right.

Q. 68. And do I understand you to say this verification was never made?

A. I stated that I had no recollection of its being done.

Q. 69. What constitutes the bills receivable shown in Exhibit 2 to McEwen's deposition, to be due the bank?

A. Bills receivable are notes due the bank.

Q. 70. Is it not a fact that this particular amount, about $8,334 represented entirely by the notes of the Grubbs Cracker Co., which has been out of existence for three or four years?

A. I cannot say what that represents without an examination of the books. I find upon examination of the books that over five thousand dollars of the above amount was against Wm. Moore, for which the bank had real estate pledged.

Q. 71. Is it not a fact that the bank carried such notes as a live asset for some time before the bank failed, when it was known that the paper was worthless?

A. I have no recollection of the bank for two or three years charging off any notes due it. I am one of those persons, though, that does not look upon a note as absolutely worthless, that is, on a young, vigorous man.

Q. 72. Is it not a fact that the bank carried paper upon parties well known to be insolvent, and in this way made the surplus what it was?

A. The bank had some paper that I did not consider good.

Q. 73. About how much?

A. I cannot state.

Q. 74. Can you approximate it?

A. I cannot.

Q. 75. Who preceded Schardt as cashier?

A. Charles Sykes.

Q. 76. Were his accounts examined and verified?

A. Not by expert examination as Schardt's were.

62 Q. 77. Was a settlement made with him when he retired?

A. I don't understand that there was ever a formal settlement made with Mr. Sykes.

Q. 78. Did the bank, at the time he retired, have any reason to suspect that he was behind in his accounts?

A. I am compelled to say this in regard to that—on the 3rd day of January, 1893, Mr. Sykes submitted his report for the previous six months' business of the bank. There were some things in that report that I thought were wrong. But before the report was discussed or accepted, I, together with others, was appointed a committee on salaries and retired from the room. In our absence the report was received by the bank and ordered filed. Subsequent to that, though, I brought to it the notice of the directory that there were some $2,000 worth of stocks purporting to belong to the bank in excess of the amount that the bank held on the first of July, 1892. The finance committee had not ordered the purchase of any such stocks, and they were at a loss to know why they were in the hands of the bank. Thereupon, a committee of three was appointed to make a formal settlement with Mr. Sykes. They put themselves in correspondence with him, and it resulted in a lawsuit, which is still pending. There never was any settlement obtained, and there is now litigation going on.

Q. 79. When was the meeting at which you called the attention of the board to this matter?

A. I think it was soon after the other meeting held on January 3, 1893.

Q. 80. Did any of that matter go upon your minutes?

A. Yes, sir, the appointment of the committee did.

Q. 81. Was Mr. Lewis T. Baxter present?

A. Yes, sir; at the meeting on 3rd January, 1893.

Q. 82. Was he spoken to with reference to the matter you have detailed before?

A. Not then.

Q. 83. Was he later?

A. I don't remember it.

Q. 84. Who was cashier before Mr. Sykes?

A. Mr. Durr.

Q. 85. When was Sykes elected?

A. Books show he was elected 6th of January, 1890.

Q. 86. Was any shortage discovered in the accounts of Mr. Durr, as cashier?

A. Yes, sir; there was a difference between him and the bank in regard to commissions.

Q. 87. Was that reported to the directors?

63 A. Yes, sir.

Q. 88. Did Mr. Lewis T. Baxter know of it?

A. I don't think he did. I do not think Baxter was connected with the bank at that time. Since writing the above and after an examination of the books, I find Baxter was connected with the bank, and the presumption is that he knew of it.

Q. 89. Did the minutes of the bank show that fact?

A. I will not be positive.

Q. 90. Was it generally known in the bank and among the directors?

A. It was known to some of us.

Q. 91. Did he resist payment?

A. Not by suit.

Q. 92. The bank's affairs were, to a certain extent, examined by an expert, were they not?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 93. How long prior to that time had an expert examined the books of the bank?

A. I don't know as it had been done at all.

Q. 94. Do you mean to be understood that you allowed the bank to run from the fall of '90 to the time of its close without a thorough examination, and at the same time state that you relied upon the statements of Schardt in the absence of such thorough examination?

A. In answer to that I will say that I was not a paid official of the bank. I did not think that I had the right to appropriate money or to run the bank into any expense. I do not understand that it is the business of a finance committee in any bank to overhaul the entire books, and therefore I did not direct any thorough examination.

Q. 95. Why was it finally done in 1893?

A. It was done mostly because the Commercial National bank had failed. There were wild rumors as to the conduct of that bank by its cashier and president, and a few days after that failure I was elected president of the Mechanics' bank, and put in an attitude where I could say what ought to be done, and with the advice of some of the directors, had the examination made.

Q. 96. Did you know that during all these years that the guarantee company had executed and the bank held its bond on Schardt as teller?

A. I knew that he was insured in a guarantee company.

Q. 97. Did you ever read the bond?

A. I have, since the deficit.

Q. 98. Did you ever hear of Schardt's speculating before January, 1893?

64 A. I think I did.

Q. 99. Did you see the anonymous letter written with respect to his speculating?

A. I saw a letter directed to Judge John Woodward. Judge Woodward brought that letter to the bank and showed it to me and I asked permission to call Mr. Schardt up and show it to him, and he said he was perfectly willing that I should do so. I at once called Mr. Schardt to where we were and told him there was a communication I wanted him to read. He did so and his remarks were: "It is a lie and I can prove it." In this letter it was stated that Mr. Schardt was a partner in a bucket shop. I told Mr. Schardt that it devolved on him to prove it false. I at once reported the contents of this letter to the president of the bank, Mr. Baxter. Mr. Schardt asked that I and Judge Woodward remain there for a few minutes. He went out and got Frank Searight and Dr. Barry. Judge Woodward, Mr. Baxter and myself went into the rear of the bank building. Mr. Schardt and the other gentlemen came back and Mr. Schardt says: "Here are men who can tell you whether that is so or not." I asked them if they knew why we had sent for them and they said that Mr. Schardt had told them. Mr. Searight said some time before that Mr. Schardt, Dr. Barry and himself had agreed to open a brokerage association. They objected very much to the term bucket shop. Each one was to put in a small amount—$200, I think. Mr. Schardt, in a short time, became dissatisfied and sold his interest to Frank Searight at a small loss. Subsequent to that I went to Mr. Schardt's house to see him, having heard again that he was speculating. I told him what I had heard and he said it was not so, that he did not own any stocks at all. I told him if he was he ought to quit that or quit the bank, and he said he had sold everything he had. I again heard that he was speculating, but from sources that I did not attach any importance to, as it all emanated from the same source as the anonymous letter. I again approached him and he denied it.

Q. 100. Was this just prior to the resignation of Judge Woodward as a member of the board?

A. I think it was.

Q. 101. Do you know when he resigned?

A. His resignation bears date Feb. 17, 1893. Was placed before the board of directors and accepted March 25, 1893.

Q. 102. Did Mr. Baxter, the president, ever say anything to you about Schardt speculating?

65 A. I don't think he ever did.

Q. 103. Just prior or soon before the failure of the bank, did you not, in connection with other members of the board, guarantee the deposit of the building & loan association for about $18,000?

A. We did on the 29th day of March.

Q. 104. Are you contesting that claim by suit?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 105. Please state the grounds of your denying liability.

A. We are clearly of the opinion that an imposition was practiced on us in order to get our names to that paper as surety.

Q. 106. Please explain how?

A. From the evidence in our possession we feel satisfied that they, the building & loan association, knew things concerning our bank that the directory of the bank did not know.

Q. 107. You mean, do you not, that you think that the officers of the building & loan association had good reason to believe that Schardt was behind in his accounts, and the directors of the bank did not know this at the time they executed the paper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 108. And upon this ground you are contesting your liability?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination:

Q. 109. From what you now know of the manner in which the defaults of Mr. Schardt was covered or hidden, would it or not have taken all the books of the bank, and an examination thereof, together with all the pass books to have made the detection?

A. I am not an expert accountant, but I so understand it.

Q. 110. Will the individual ledger which should show deposits, show the default made in money deposited, without the aid of the pass book?

A. No, sir; I think not.

Q. 111. Were the examinations made by the committee, the usual and ordinary examinations made by national and State banks?

A. I have carefully inquired into this matter and I so understand it.

Q. 112. How long did it take the experts to take the account?

A. I cannot say—several months.

66 Q. 113. Was Schardt, while teller or cashier, required by any law of the bank, to keep an individual ledger or do work for it in this direction, or was it done by him voluntarily?

A. He was elected teller and book-keeper.

Q. 114. I will ask you if much of the paper held by the bank at the time of the failure of the Commercial National bank was injured by reason of that and other failures in this community?

A. Yes, sir; they were very much injured because it produced a panic and every kind of security depreciated in value.

Q. 115. Did Sykes' liability to the bank and for which he is now sued arise strictly and purely out of any defalcation such as taking money out of the bank, or are they debts arising out of negligence, contracts, etc.?

A. He is not a defaulter, but his liability is what we conceive to be an indebtedness to the bank.

Q. 116. In respect to notes taken by Sykes and sued upon in the State of Alabama, was that known until the receiver found it out?

A. No, sir.

Recross-examination:

Q. 117. You have stated that you have thoroughly investigated the method of bank examinations. Was that before or after the shortage occurred?

A. Afterwards.

Q. 118. Do you know what methods of examination the banks used prior to the time the bank failed?

A. We used the same course of examinations as national banks do, as I understand it.

Q. 119. Are the books kept by the same parties and in the same ways in the national banks as they are kept in your bank?

A. I cannot say.

Q. 120. Did you ever hear of a cashier of a national bank keeping a general ledger and cash book?

A. I don't know that I did.

Q. 121. Did you ever hear of the teller doing so?

A. No, except in one instance at Springfield, Tenn.

Q. 122. Did Mr. Durr keep your cash book and general ledger while he was cashier?

A. I don't believe he did. Am not positive about it.

Q. 123. Did Mr. Sykes?

A. No, sir; only in the absence of Mr. Schardt.

Q. 124. You have stated that the shortage could not have 67 been discovered by an examination of the individual ledger without comparing it with the pass books; is it not a fact that at any time after the shortage began the totals of the individual ledger when compared with the totals shown on the daily balance book, have shown a large discrepancy?

A. Schardt's defalcation was such that it would have naturally shown that there was something wrong as it did when we commenced on it.

A. 125. How long did it take Mr. McEwen to ascertain that there was a large shortage when he began on the books?

A. It was seven or eight hours before he reported that there was a de crepancy. He began in the morning and did not report until in the evening. I asked them what they based the shortage on, and they told me they had found a greater amount due individual depositors than was shown on daily balance book.

Q. 126. And upon this information, derived in a very few hours, you felt justified in going to Schardt's house and accusing him, a very sick man, of being a defaulter?

A. I did not accuse him.

Q. 127. You were present when Mr. Richardson did?

A. Yes, sir.

Re-examination:

Q. 128. And he admitted it when pressed?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 129. And the experts have so reported it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 130. What was this alleged shortage of Durr as cashier?

A. As I understand it, he claimed to be owner of certain commissions made by him, while the bank people claimed that it had hired all his time and the commissions so earned should be turned over to the bank. There was no charge involving abstractions or embezzlement of the funds of the bank or otherwise.

Q. 131. After the failure of the Commercial bank and it became evident that all banks would suffer more or less, what did you do?

A. We took a number of collaterals of our bank and went to the American National bank and borrowed $50,000, the directors going upon the note. We borrowed this money believing that it would run our little bank safely over all troubles, or rather the directors borrowed the money on their own paper and then our bank gave them its note and collaterals to indemnify them against loss.

68 Q. 132. How long after you became president before you set on foot a- expert examination of the affairs of your own bank?

A. After the Commercial bank closed excitement ran high, and all were uneasy at its exposure, and a few days thereafter I called in the expert, McEwen, to go over our books.

Q. 133. You say in your cross-examination that it is not usual for tellers of national banks and cashiers to keep the individual ledgers, now why was not this course pursued in your little bank?

A. It was a small bank and the service could easily be performed, while national banks require all the time of such officers for other duties, because of their larger capital and larger business. There was no by-law requiring the cashier or teller to do this work, it was economical and voluntary on the part of such officers. We always had a clerk to keep the individual ledgers, and if he got pushed in his work the others would help him, and in this way the work goes on.

Recross-examination:

Q. 134. You have stated in question 111 that certain bankers had told you that the examinations in their banks were like the ones made in your bank, please state who these bankers were.

A. Well, I talked with Judge Woodward, who is on the finance committee of the American bank, and Joel F. Carter, of the First National bank, and I am under the impression that I talked with another man. These men stated that they did not go into the general books of the bank in their examinations.

Q. 135. In question 70 you have stated that over $5,000 of the bills receivable, as shown on your daily balance book, were on William Moore, secured by real estate.

Q. 136. Please state what constituted the remaining part of the bills receivable.

A. The remaining part, as I understand it without a thorough examination of the books, is a note or notes on H. B. Grubbs, on which the Grubbs Cracker Co. stock is pledged as collateral.

Q. 137. When did the Grubbs Cracker Co. cease to do business?

A. I don't know.

Q. 138. Was it not some years ago?

A. Yes, sir.

69 Q. 139. Has the stock since it ceased to do business been worth anything at all?

A. I have not investigated it, but presume it is worthless.

Q. 140. Were not the assets of the firm insufficient to pay its debts?

A. It is a matter I know nothing about, only just from general rumor.

Q. 141. Has or not H. B. Grubbs been insolvent for a number of years?

A. My understanding is that he has been insolvent.

Q. 142. How many years prior to the failure of your bank was it when Grubbs ceased to pay any interest on this debt?

A. He ceased paying interest before the bank closed, but how long before I do not know.

Q. 143. Is it not a fact that for two years before the bank failed that the bank held paper against insolvent parties which was counted in making the surplus of the bank what it was represented to be?

A. I don't remember of any paper that the bank held on insolvent parties except as against Grubbs.

Q. 144. In making up the statement for January 1, 1893, was not the paper against insolvent parties used, and counted at its face value?

A. We used some paper that might be considered insolvent, owing to the depreciation of collaterals placed on the notes as security. One instance, the Grubbs debt.

Q. 145. Then your financial statement of the condition of the bank the first of January, 1893, which showed a surplus of more than $25,000, was not correct, if the paper held by the bank had been estimated at its then value?

A. If you take out any notes that there might be a suspicion of their insolvency, the surplus was not properly shown, but until a doubtful debt or debts is charged off, my understanding is that it is usual to carry them as an asset. The surplus as shown by the books of the bank December, '92, is $27,116.63.

Q. 146. Is it not a fact that for two or three years prior to the failure of the bank, no paper was charged off?

A. I don't remember of any paper being charged off during that length of time. If there was, it was a small amount.

Q. 147. You knew, did you not, the first of January, 1893,
70 that if the bank would then close down, it would not be able to realize the surplus as shown by its statement?

A. I don't think they would have realized a sufficiency if it had closed down at that time to have made the surplus as shown.

Q. 148. With reference to the suit against Sykes, is it not claimed that he purchased stock in the name of the bank for the purpose of aiding himself personally in certain enterprises?

A. My understanding of this is that Mr. Sykes used some notes against a certain Sheffield company that was due the Mechanics' bank in the purchase of stock in another Sheffield company, which stock was issued in the name of L. T. Baxter, M. A. Spurr, Frank Porterfield, and possibly himself or his brother.

Q. 149. Then did the bank receive new stock purchased with the notes of the bank?

A. It did not.

Q. 150. Is or not Sykes charged with fraudulent acts while cashier of the bank by which the bank lost either money or assets, in the suit against him which you have referred to before?

A. I don't know what is in the bill at all. I don't understand that he is accused of fraud. But the bank failed to get certain commissions due it, and the stock for which the notes (due the bank) was used in its purchase was not turned over to the bank, and certain stocks was thrust onto the bank January 1, '93, at a much larger price than the then market value.

Q. 151. Did the bank during the time that Durr was cashier, act as broker in buying and selling securities of all kind?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 152. Did it charge a regular commission?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 153. What officer of the bank had charge of the brokerage department?

A. The cashier.

Q. 154. Did the bank keep an account known as commission account?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 155. Who procured the services of Prof. Jennings to examine the accounts of Durr?

A. My impression is that Mr. Richardson and myself went to see Jennings.

Q. 156. Why did you get Jennings to examine the accounts?

71 A. Because we thought there was some irregularity in his accounts.

Q. 157. What was the substance of Jennings' report?

A. Prof. Jennings reported as I recollect it that he had ascertained that Durr had collected and failed to report about $1,100 in commissions.

Q. 158. When this report was submitted, then what happened?

A. Mr. Durr paid the amount assessed against him, protesting then and always has protested that it was wrong.

Q. 159. He did not deny having received this money did he?

A. I don't think he did.

Q. 160. Is it not a fact that immediately upon the report of Prof. Jennings being made, that one of your officers wrote Durr's resignation as cashier, and handed it to him to sign?

A. I don't know.

Q. 161. He did resign at once, did he not?

A. Yes, sir. He resigned Dec. 14th, 1889.

Q. 162. Did the bank not run on until the next annual meeting without any cashier at all?

A. Without reference to the books, I am unable to state when Mr. Durr's resignation took effect, and his successor was elected. I have examined the books and find that Mr. Sykes was elected at next meeting of board Jan. 6th, 1890.

Q. 163. Was or not this Durr's contention, that he was entitled to half the commissions and the bank the other half: and was not the $1,100 the one-half retained by him?

A. I don't recollect exactly how this was.

Q. 164. Was it not ascertained that the method by which Durr obtained these commissions and retained them, was by changing the method of keeping the account of the commissions on the books of the bank?

A. I don't remember.

Q. 165. Please explain what you mean when you say that Judge Woodward and Mr. Joel Carter stated that the examinations in their bank were like those made by your bank?

A. What I mean is this: I understand from those gentlemen that a list of the evidences of debt due the bank was made out by their clerk, and the clerk would call over these amounts, the finance committee seeing that they agreed with the securities on hand. Then the total was compared with the general ledger to see if it 72 corresponded, the difference being that their total footings was compared with the general ledger, and ours was compared with the daily balance book. The results so far as our bank was concerned would have been the same as Schardt falsified the general ledger and then falsified the daily balance book to make it correspond with the ledger and only an expert examination of all the books would have brought it out.

Q. 166. Then your meaning is that they stated that their examination of the assets of the bank were a similar — to the examinations of the assets made in your bank?

A. Yes, sir, that is the way I understand it.

Q. 167. You do not mean to say what examination was made with reference to verifying the liabilities of the bank, do you?

A. No, sir, there was nothing said in regard to that between the gentlemen I spoke to and myself.

When this deposition was taken, in answer to question No. 61, I said "We took his word for it." After the deposition was written out and given to me to read over and sign, I added the rest of the answer as set forth.

J. M. EATHERLY.

Deposition of Maj. James J. Pryor, Taken by Consent in the Above Cause.

Q. 1. Please state your age, occupation and present residence.

A. Aged fifty-five years. I am a book-keeper. At present I am assignee of Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company.

Q. 2. Please state whether you employed any one to go through the books of the bank with a view to ascertaining its condition, if so, whom did you employ, and what are the respective characters of these gentlemen as expert book-keepers and accountants?

A. I employed Prof. R. W. Jennings, and Samuel D. F. McEwen. They are both capable accountants and I believe they stand high as expert book-keepers among people who know them.

Q. 3. When you employed experts to pass over the books, did you notify any one to put in a book-keeper, if so, whom, and what answer did you get?

A. I asked Guarantee Company of North America, to put in an expert accountant with those I engaged. They declined to do so. I invited Union Bank & Trust Co., adm'r of John Schardt, to furnish an expert. I also asked Mr. Schardt's relatives to 73 send Mr. Allen B. Fisher to examine with us, as I understand that Mr. Schardt had requested that Mr. Fisher be allowed to examine the books in his interest and behalf.

Q. 4. Please state whether or not you are a book-keeper, and whether you have gone through the accounts of John Schardt as cashier and teller of said bank, and whether Exhibit X is correct in respect to his embezzlements and defalcations.

A. I am a book-keeper. I did not go over all the scope of examinations in exact details with the experts engaged to do the work, but I aided in part of the work, and verified the footings of Exhibit X, though I did not follow out the interest calculations.

Q. 5. Please state whether or not the bank was a State or national bank.

A. It was a State bank.

Q. 6. State who were the executive officers of said bank.

A. J. M. Eatherly, president; Wm. Porter, vice-president; John Schardt, cashier, and Frank Boeusch, Jr., teller, at time of assignment by the bank. Just previously L. T. Baxter had been president, Wm. Porter, vice-president, Chas. Sykes, cashier, and John Schardt, teller.

Q. 7. State whether John Schardt is now living or dead. If the latter, when he died, and who administered upon his estate.

A. Schardt is dead. Died 17th day of April, 1893. Union Bank & Trust Co., of this city, administered upon his estate.

Q. 8. Please state what offices in said bank Schardt filled, and during what time he did so.

A. He was teller and collector up to the first days in Jan. 1893, his bond as such teller was paid for up to Jan. 16th, 1893, but about first day of January, 1893, he was made cashier, and his bond as cashier dates 1st of January, 1893.

Q. 9. Please state whether his original bond as teller and collector was renewed from time to time annually until he was elected cashier on January 1st, 1893.

A. It was—payment made till the 16th of January, 1893.

Q. 10. What books did the bank keep or have?

A. A general ledger, individual ledgers, cash book, deposit register, check register, discount register and such other auxiliary books as experience showed to be necessary for the business.

74 Q. 11. Please set out the by-law relating to the duties of the cashier and teller as taken from the minutes.

A. Sec. 10, page 11, on Minute Book, shows duties of cashier, defined by by-laws, as follows: "The cashier shall have the general supervision and control of the business of the bank, except as otherwise provided. He shall see that all the accounts and books are properly kept, and submit the report of the finance committee at each semi-annual meeting." Section 14, page 11, on Minute Book, shows duties of teller defined by by-laws as follows: "The teller shall also be the general book-keeper of the bank, and shall give bond in the sum of $10,000.00 with two or more acceptable sureties to the finance committee. One-half of the bond shall be in some acceptable guarantee company, and the other half in personal security, but the teller may at his option give the whole bond in the guarantee company."

Cross-examination:

Q. 12. When were the by-laws adopted which you have referred to?

A. December, 1885.

Q. 13. What do you mean by deposit register?

A. Where there is a record kept of deposits made by depositors.

Q. 14. Explain the nature of it.

A. It is a record book where all deposits made by depositors are recorded and posted from there to the individual ledgers.

Q. 15. What do you mean by check register?

A. The checks paid by this bank arranged alphabetically on the check register.

Q. 16. What was the capital stock of the bank?

A. $50,000.

Q. 17. Was the cashier paid a salary for his services?

A. He was paid a salary I understand.

Q. 18. What amount of commercial paper was received by you as assignee?

A. There was turned over to me: Cash, $19.46; discounts, $31,005.22; demand-loan notes, $3,598.65; accounts, $6,342.14; bills receivable, $3,162.50; overdrafts, $12,709.56.

Q. 19. What amount of the bank's paper was hypothecated with the loan from the American National bank referred to by J. M. Eatherly?

A. Just a little above $100,000.

Q. 20. How much of the above assets have you collected?

75 A. I have collected about $14,000.

Q. 21. About how much of the paper in your hands was against insolvent parties at the time you received it?

A. I cannot tell you. I know that the Grubbs debt was insolvent.

Q. 22. Do you know how much of the paper as collateral with the American National bank was insolvent?

A. No, I do not.

Q. 23. Did you find any record in the bank of any paper having been charged off within the last two or three years of its existence?

A. I have seen no record of anything of the sort.

Q. 24. What has become of the Moore debt referred to by J. M. Eatherly?

A. The property was sold Saturday, the 10th of this month, under decree of the court.

Q. Will this trust receive any part of the proceeds of that sale?

A. I look for something.

Q. 26. In what way?

A. The excess above the lien and expenses on the property will certainly distribute something among the creditors, but the real estate is subject to advance bids, and we think it will bring more than the sale indicated.

Q. 27. At this time do you intend to advance the bids or do you know any one else who intends to do so?

A. I heard a disappointed bidder saying he would advance the bid, and the purchaser challenged him to do it now. I presume the intent was to advance the bid.

Q. 28. What are the total liabilities of the bank?

A. About $203,000 ascertained with a probability of a little increase.

Deposition of A. W. Harris, Taken by the Complainant.

Q. 1. Please state what experience you have had in the banking business, and what position you now fill, and have heretofore filled, and what is the capital stock of the bank?

A. I have been in the banking business twenty-five years; I commenced as a clerk and am now cashier of the American National bank and its capital stock is one million dollars.

Q. 2. Is it possible for a clerk or other agent of a bank to 76 embezzle its money without detection at the time where trial balances are made and had every few days or at short intervals?

A. If the entries were very few and you had some one or a committee to pass over and examine original entries and items, yes, sir. Otherwise, no, sir. I believe that any scoundrel could evade detection from any finance committee or board of examiners under any system of book-keeping known to banks, without detection.

Q. 3. Is it the habit of finance committees to accept as correct statements made to them from time to time, by the officers and clerks of the bank?

A. It is.

Q. 4. Are such committees in the habit of examining original items and adding up columns, or merely accepting it as correct?

A. They are not and do not.

Q. 5. Under any book-keeping known to banks, what is the only mode of preventing embezzlement?

A. Honest men.

Q. 6. Have you in your observation and experience known of an instance in which every book required by the banking laws of the United States to be kept, was kept by a bank, and the taking of trial balances was done daily, and yet money was lost and undetected for a long time?

A. I have known it to cover a period of three years and to the amount of sixteen or seventeen thousand dollars.

Q. 7. And you took off daily trial balances?

A. Yes, sir; and the trial balances were all right, according to his showing.

Q. 8. Is it possible to get the exact financial condition of a bank without stopping for awhile and calling in the pass books and having an expert go through ths whole thing?

A. It is not.

Further deponent sayeth not.

A. W. HARRIS.

Subscribed and sworn to before me on this 5th day of March 1895.

BUFORD DUKE,
Notary Public.

77 Cross-examination:

Q. 1. Do you think that any scoundrel could steal the full amount of your capital stock and surplus without detection?

A. With ordinary care it would be impossible.

Q. 2. Your bank is examined at least once a year by national bank examiners?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 3. What method does your executive committee pursue when it makes an examination of the bank?

A. It makes quarterly examinations of the bank. It counts all the cash; it goes through in detail with the discounted notes and demand loans; it verifies the amount of cash and amount of notes on hand by the books. They go through the notes in detail and then see that the amount of them is verified by the books.

Q. 4. Does your bank require trial balances from the individual ledgers, and if so, what is done with them?

A. Yes, sir, it is required once a month and they are verified by the general ledger balances.

Q. 5. Suppose a bank should not require a trial balance from the individual ledgers for more than two years, what would you say as to the degree of care exercised by the bank officers?

A. It would be very loose.

Q. 6. Suppose the teller kept the general books and the individual books were kept by an individual book-keeper, would it or not be grossly negligent in the bank officials not to have a trial balance from the individual ledgers, and compare it with the general ledger for more than two years?

A. It would.

Q. 7. Would it be possible to know anything about the condition of the bank without knowing this?

A. An accurate résumé of the business would demand it.

Q. 8. Is it customary in your bank, and others, so far as you know, for the executive committee to make an examination to see that the trial balance from the individual ledgers agrees with the amount shown on the general ledger to be due individual depositors?

A. The executive committee sees every morning the amount due individual depositors, and the officers of the bank constantly see that the individual ledgers and the general ledgers agree.

Q. 9. You have stated that the only mode of preventing embezzlement is honest men; please state whether or not a 78 teller could, through a period of years abstract large amounts of money from the bank, and allow his books to be entirely out of balance with the individual ledgers and not be caught?

A. I should think his being out of balance would detect him.

Q. 10. Suppose the teller in a bank kept all the books except the individual ledger, which was kept by another man, and suppose the books kept by the teller were out of balance with the individual ledger in an amount exceeding $19,000, and the bank should certify that the accounts of the teller had been examined, and found correct; would you regard this as a grossly negligent statement, supposing the capital stock to be $50,000 and its surplus $27,000?

A. I would.

A. W. HARRIS.

Endorsed: Filed May 15, 1895. H. M. Doak, clerk.

Deposition of Frank Boensch, Taken by Consent Nov. 5th on Behalf of the Defendant Company.

Q. 1. State your age and residence?

A. Twenty-five years old and live in Nashville.

Q. 2. Were you at any time connected with the Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co.?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 3. When and in what capacity?

A. I was clerk from 1888 until the bank closed.

Q. 4. Did you at any time keep the individual ledger in the bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 5. When did you begin and when did you stop?

A. I began in the early part of 1890 and continued to keep the books until the bank closed.

Q. 6. Were you at any time during that period required to take from the individual ledger a trial balance, and if so, during what time and was a record kept of such trial balances?

A. Yes, I was required to take off a trial balance from the time I begun until about the time that Durr left the bank the last of 1890. After that time Mr. John Schardt told me that it was not necessary to take off trial balances any longer and thereafter none were taken off. At first a trial balance was taken off every two weeks and later once a month. There was a book in the bank called a trial balance book in which these balances were entered when they were taken off.

79 Q. 7. Did these trial balances always agree with the amounts shown to be due individual depositors on the general ledger account kept by Schardt?

A. They did except occasionally when the balances were first taken off there would be an error or discrepancy between my books and the general ledger, and we would have to go back and check off until we found the error and made my balance agree with the balance on the general ledger, which was always done before we stopped.

Q. 8. Then do you mean to say that from the latter part of 1890 until the time the bank closed, you could never tell whether your individual ledgers agreed with the amounts shown to be due individual depositors on the general ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 9. Should the amount due individual depositors as shown by your books have agreed with the amount shown to be due individual depositors on the daily balance book and the general ledger?

A. Yes, sir; the daily balance book is merely a copy of the total amounts shown on the general ledger.

Q. 10. Did you work in the bank while Mr. Durr was cashier?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 11. Why did he leave the bank?

A. I think because he was required to resign.

Q. 12. Did you know that he was short?

A. I knew in a general way of the shortage and knew that he paid up what the bank claimed, but I never knew the details because it was kept from me.

Q. 13. In taking off the trial balances from your books, state what you did, how and when you did it.

A. I added up the amount shown to be due each depositor on my book of that date and then added the total together. I did this always between the close of business one day and the opening of business the next day. The work would always necessitate my doing a part of it at least at night.

Q. 14. Was it necessary to do the work between business hours?

A. Yes, sir; because the books would be constantly changing during business hours.

Cross-examination by E. H. EAST:

Q. 15. Were you under the orders of the cashier, Schardt?

A. Yes, sir.

80 Q. 16. Was it in obedience to his orders that you ceased to keep or take off the trial balances?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 17. What was the trouble between Durr and the bank officers?

A. It was a difference between them in respect to the ownership of some commissions, arising from the sale of stock for outside parties and the bank.

Q. 18. What was the force of the bank?

A. Three at all times, consisting of Schardt, myself, Gillespie part of the time, and McDowell.

Q. 19. What did you do?

A. I was clerk, but helped the others when directed. I was teller in 1893 from January until the bank assigned.

FRANK BOENSCH, JR.

Endorsed: Filed May 15, 1895. H. M. Doak, clerk.

Deposition of Chas. Sykes, Taken by Defendant.

Q. 1. Where do you live?

A. Nashville, Tennessee.

Q. 2. Were you at any time cashier of the Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Company?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 3. Who did you succeed as cashier?

A. Durr.

Q. 4. Who succeeded you?

A. John Schardt.

Q. 5. Were you cashier of the bank during the whole of the year 1892?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. Did you at any time during that year receive information that John Schardt was speculating; if so, state when, how and all the circumstances?

A. Yes, sir; I did receive such information. Some time in the summer or fall of 1892 a gentleman by the name of Kyle came here from New York, representing Myers & Co. of New York. Kyle wanted me to become interested in the brokerage business, and represent Myers & Co. at this point. I told him that I did not like the idea because it would be purely a speculative business, and he then said that that made no difference; that John Schardt, our teller, was a part owner in a similar concern.

Q. 7. Did you impart this knowledge to any one; if so, whom?

81 A. Yes, sir, I once told Mr. L. T. Baxter, the president of the bank, of the conversation.

Q. 8. Did you say anything to Schardt about the matter?

A. Yes, sir, on the next day I think I told Mr. Schardt of what Kyle had said.

Q. 9. What did Schardt say to you in reply?

A. He admitted that he had at one time been interested in such a concern, but had sold his interest; and that he had speculated to some extent, but had made money on every transaction, and had seen the error of his way and had ceased to do so any more.

Q. 10. Did you impart this information received from Schardt to any one connected with the bank, if so, whom?

A. Yes, sir, I immediately told Mr. Baxter, the president of the bank, what Schardt had said.

Q. 11. Did you receive any other information at any other time with reference to Schardt's speculating?

A. Yes, sir, some time thereafter I received an anonymous letter telling me that Schardt had been speculating.

Q. 12. What did you do with it and what became of it?

A. I showed it to Mr. L. T. Baxter, the president, and he said not to pay any attention to an anonymous letter, and I spoke to Schardt about it, and he said he thought he knew the author, and asked me to let him have the letter, and he would bring the party before me and make him acknowledge it was false.

Q. 13. Did you give him the letter and did he bring the party before you?

A. I gave him the letter, and asked him about it more than once, and he always replied that he was working on it.

Q. 14. Did you tell Mr. Baxter of this conversation?

A. I think I did.

Cross-examination:

Q. 1. Were you cashier of the bank for two or three years before January 1, 1893, and was Schardt teller during this same time?

A. I was elected cashier in December, 1889, and remained as such until the early part of January, 1893. During that time Mr. Schardt was the teller and general book-keeper.

Q. 2. Where does the president, Lewis T. Baxter, now live?

82 A. Mr. Lewis T. Baxter is at present in the State of New York. I do not know that he considers that his home.

Q. 3. Did you or not sign several of the certificates for the annual renewal of Schardt's bond as teller?

A. I did sign several applications for the renewal of Mr. Schardt's bond, but did so on the fact that the finance committee said his accounts were correct.

Q. 4. Did you not recommend Schardt to Mr. Porter and Sanford Duncan as a fit and proper man to take your place as cashier when you resigned?

A. I do not remember that I recommended Mr. Schardt as my successor to either Mr. Wm. Porter or Mr. Duncan. I may have done so, however. If Mr. Porter says I did, I suppose I did.

Q. 5. Who prepared and put before the board of directors, at the semi-annual meetings, the statements of the officers of the bank?

A. It was my custom to prepare semi-annually a statement from the daily balance book, kept by Mr. Schardt, and submit the same to the finance committee as my report; this same report then was made to the directors.

Q. 6. If you state that you prepared and laid before the directors such a statement, please state if they were not honestly and fairly made out?

A. All reports made by me were honestly made from what appeared on the daily balance book.

Q. 7. How often did the finance committee meet and examine statements made to them by executive officers, count the cash and examine into the condition of the bank financially?

A. The finance committee were supposed to meet quarterly for the alleged purpose of examining the condition of the bank. They met semi-annually to examine statements made by the officers. I cannot say how often they made any examination, as I was not present when these supposed examinations were alleged to have been made.

Q. 8. Is there not now pending litigation between you and the assignee of the bank?

A. There is.

Endorsed: Filed May 15, 1895. H. M. Doak, clerk.

83 Deposition of William Porter, Taken by Complainant.

Q. 1. Please state if you were a director in the Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, and if you had a conversation about January, 1895, with Charles Sykes in regard to his successor as cashier.

A. I was a director in the bank and did have such conversation at the time mentioned, and he did recommend John Schardt as a suitable man to take his position as cashier.

Cross-examination:

Q. 2. How long were you connected with the said bank?

A. From its organization to its close.

Q. 3. Were you, during that time, a member of the executive committee?

A. I was not.

Q. 4. Were you at any time a member of the executive committee?

A. No, sir, I was made vice-president when the bank commenced and remained that way to the close.

Q. 5. Did you have anything to do with the examination of Schardt's accounts from time to time?

A. I was present frequently, but I took no part in it.

Q. 6. Were you at the bank often?

A. No, sir. I was there in July and January, and that was about all.

Q. 7. Why did you make inquiry of Sykes as to Schardt?

A. Knowing that Charley was retiring, and we had to have a cashier, I asked Sykes about Schardt's ability; there was no question as to his integrity; it was as to his ability I was asking.

WM. PORTER.

Filed May 15 '95.

H. M. DOAK, Clerk.

Deposition of James McLaughlin, Taken by Defendant.

Q. 1. State your residence and occupation.

A. Nashville; cashier of Merchants' bank.

Q. 2. What is the capital of your bank?

A. $150,000.

Q. 3. How long has the bank been in existence?

A. Since 1886.

Q. 4. What force do you work in your bank?

84 A. We have a president, cashier and teller, and two book-keepers, one of them is a general book-keeper and the other assists the teller in keeping the individual ledgers.

Q. 5. Do you require the individual book-keeper to make out a trial balance from his individual ledgers, showing the amount due depositors?

A. We require that to be done monthly—the name of the depositor and the amount due is credited.

Q. 6. Is this compared with the amount shown to be due on the general ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 7. If there is a discrepancy, what is done?

A. The work has to be checked back over until the error is discovered.

Q. 8. Is there any way of telling what the liabilities of the bank are, without having a trial balance from the individual books?

A. No, sir, I know of no other way.

Q. 9. Is that the general custom of banks?

A. That is my impression.

Q. 10. Suppose your teller was also your general book-keeper, how would you go about verifying his accounts?

A. In that event the teller would keep his own books and would make off his statement every month. Then the individual book-keeper would make a trial balance from his books and these would be compared.

Q. 11. What do you understand the following language to mean: "The accounts of the teller have been examined and verified"?

A. I understand it to mean that you have to verify his statements by outside corroborative proof.

Q. 12. Is there any way of verifying in this manner the accounts of the teller in a bank where he is also the general book-keeper?

A. Yes, sir, there is a way of doing it.

Q. 13. How long have you been in the banking business?

A. I have been in the banking business since 1870, more or less.

Q. 14. Are you a practical book-keeper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 15. Are you thoroughly posted in that line of business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 16. Suppose the teller in a small bank kept the general
85 books, and suppose the bank examiners did not procure a trial balance from the individual book-keeper showing the amount due depositors, and certified that they had examined and verified the accounts, would this be a true statement?

A. It would not be a correct statement.

Q. 17. Did you ever hear of a bank, or know of an instance in which no trial balance was taken from the individual ledgers for more than two years?

A. I don't know of any instance of that kind.

Q. 18. If a bank acted in this way, would you consider it good banking?

A. I would not consider it safe banking.

Q. 19. Would the bank officers be able to tell the condition of the bank?

A. I think not.

JAS. McLAUGHLIN.

Cross-examination by Judge EAST:

Q. 1. Where the finance committee is the body to look over quarterly the accounts of the officer, is it usual for the committee to do more than pass over and compare statements laid before them by the executive agents or clerks, count the money and compare assets with statements?

A. Is it usual to count the cash, examine and compare the assets with the statement and compare the statement with the footing of the journal.

Q. 2. It is customary for finance committees of banks to go through the books and look up original entries?

A. Not unless they have their attention called to some particular matter. It is not customary.

Q. 3. Suppose a teller were to receive money for a depositor and then make the entry in the pass book, then tear up the ticket of the depositor, would the books show anything thereof?

A. No. They would show nothing of the transaction at all. Nothing.

Q. 4. In such case would a trial balance of any other statement for the books throw any light upon the financial condition of the bank?

A. No.

86 Q. 5. It is customary for the teller or cashier in small banks to keep the general ledger?

A. Either the general ledger or the individual ledger. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. It is not customary in small banks in Nashville for the teller to keep the general ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Endorsed: Filed May 15, '95. H. M. Doak, clerk.

Deposition of Charles B. Duncan, Taken by Defendant.

Q. 1. Where do you live?

A. Nashville.

Q. 2. Have you had any experience in banking, if so how much?

A. Yes, sir; I was clerk in the Fourth National bank for a few months, in the Merchants' bank for about two years, and in the First National bank about four years, and in the Bank of Commerce for about four years, and I was in the First National bank at South Pittsburg for about six months.

Q. 3. What position did you fill in the Bank of Commerce and in the bank at South Pittsburg?

A. Cashier of the Bank of Commerce and assistant cashier of the bank at South Pittsburg.

Q. Where are all of the banks located of which yau have spoken except the bank at South Pittsburg?

A. Nashville.

Q. 5. Are you an accountant and book-keeper?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. Are you thoroughly familiar with the system of banking?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 7. Are you familiar with the usual and ordinary method of examining banks?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 8. What was the capital stock of the Bank of Commerce?

A. Thirty thousand dollars.

Q. 9. What force did you have in the bank?

A. We had a teller and book-keeper, besides the officers.

Q. 10. What books did the teller keep?

A. The individual books.

Q. 11. Do you or not mean the individual ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

87 Q. 12. Was it customary to take off trial balances from the individual ledger, if so, how often and what was done with them?

A. Yes, sir, it was customary, and they were taken off at least once a month, and these balances were compared with the balances shown on the general ledger representing the amount due individual depositors.

Q. 13. Did you have a daily balance book?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 14. How were the affairs of the bank examined with reference to its assets and liabilities?

A. We took the daily balance book and counted the notes on hand, the cash, stocks and bonds, and other items of asset shown on the book and verified them. We then took a trial balance from the individual ledgers, and compared this with the amount shown to be due individual depositors on the general ledger and the daily balance book, and if these compared correctly, we felt that the bank was all right.

Q. 15. Is it necessary to go through all of the books, in making examinations in a bank, in order to ascertain whether the amount shown to be due individual depositors on the individual ledgers, agrees with the amount shown to be due individual depositors on the general ledger?

A. It is not necessary—all you have to do is to take your trial balance from the individual ledger and compare it with the amount shown to be due on the general ledger.

Q. 16. Is this customary and usual in bank examinations?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 17. What do you mean and what is generally understood, by stating that the accounts of a teller or other person have been examined and verified?

A. It means that their accounts have been examined and verified by evidence other than the statements of the person who is being examined.

Q. 18. Was the Bank of Commerce a State bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 19. Did it do a brokerage business?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 20. To whom did the commissions belong?

A. They belonged to the bank.

Q. 21. If the cashier should withhold commissions earned by the sale or purchase of stocks and bonds, would there be any difference, so far as the bank was concerned, between that and taking money out of the drawer?

88 A. None whatever in my opinion.

Q. 22. Is it customary and usual in all banks to examine and verify the accounts of the employés of the bank in the way you have indicated?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 23. Suppose the teller kept the general ledger, how would you verify his accounts?

A. In the same way that you would if he kept the individual ledger.

Q. 24. Does the amount of the trial balance from the individual ledgers, always agree with the amount of the general ledgers?

A. There are some small discrepancies which are easily found by checking back.

Q. 25. Is it customary and usual to require these errors to be discovered as soon as it is ascertained that the balances do not agree?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 26. If there was a discrepancy of several thousand dollars between the two statements, would or not this create a suspicion that something was wrong?

A. Yes, unless found within a very short time.

Cross-examination of CHAS. B. DUNCAN by E. H. EAST:

Q. 27. Is it not customary in Nashville in cases of banks with small capital for the teller or cashier to keep an individual ledger or a general ledger?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 28. How was this done in the Bank of Commerce?

A. The teller in the Bank of Commerce at one time kept the general ledger, and later kept the individual ledger.

Q. 29. Please state how the bank at South Pittsburg managed its affairs in this respect?

A. When I was connected with it I was assistant cashier and teller, and also kept the individual and general ledger.

Q. 30. When did the Bank of Commerce close and make an assignment?

A. March 25th, 1893.

Q. 31. Is it customary for the finance committee on their quarterly examinations to go to the original books and foot up columns and examine original items or entries, or do they merely accept statements made to them by the officers and clerks of the bank?

89 A. No, sir, they accept statements made to them by the executive force and clerks as shown by the books of the bank and do not examine original entries. They count the cash and compare the assets with the statements. Such is the habit.

Q. 32. When there is no suspicion of the integrity of the officers or clerks, is it customary or usual to call in outside witnesses at these meetings of the finance committee to determine whether the accounts are correct or not?

A. No, sir.

Q. 33. Is it possible in a bank where you have one or more dishonest clerks or officers to detect from the books alone embezzlements made by such without calling in pass books, stopping in a large degree the business of the bank, and taking a general account?

A. It is impossible without calling in the pass books and stopping, to a large degree, the business of the bank.

Q. 34. Do you not know of a case where they kept all of the books, took off trial balances daily, and where there was but one man implicated, yet he got $16,000 or $17,000 out of the bank?

A. Yes, sir; there is one such case in Nashville.

Q. 35. Is there any such thing as detecting embezzlement in all of its forms and many of its forms by mere examination of the books of the bank?

A. No, sir.

Q. 36. Is there any mode of book-keeping known to banks, or used by banks, by which a dishonest employé can be detected through the books?

A. In some instances it can be detected by the books alone. There are others in which it cannot be detected alone from the books.

Q. 37. When the finance committee meets and has its statement furnished to them by the employés, showing the results of the books, and have counted the cash and compared the assets with the statements thereof furnished them by the officers of the bank, is not these things what is known as having examined and verified the accounts of employés?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 38. Do you know of any instance in which outside testimony was called in by a finance committee where there was no suspicion of the integrity of any of its officers or executive force?

A. No, sir.

Q. 39. Was the Bank of Commerce a State bank?

A. Yes, sir.

Redirect examination:

Q. 40. In answer to question 27 you say that it is the 90 custom in Nashville in small banks for the teller or cashier to keep some of the books. Do you mean to say that you know of a bank in which the cashier keeps any of the books?

A. I don't know of a bank where the cashier ever did keep any books.

Q. 41. Why did you keep the books in the bank at South Pittsburg?

A. Because the bank had just started. It was a small bank and there was no one else in it but myself.

Q. 42. Was or not that a temporary arrangement?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 43. How long did it last?

A. About three or four months.

Q. 44. In answer to question 31 you state that it is not customary for the finance committee on their quarterly examinations to examine original items or entries—do you mean to be understood as saying that the footings on the books themselves are not compared?

A. No, I mean to say the footings on the books themselves are compared, and in most cases where the original items are not examined, the original entries are.

Q. 45. Is it necessary to stop the business of the bank at all, in order to see that the amount of notes and discounts on hand agree with the amount shown to be on hand by the daily balance book?

A. No, sir; I don't see why it is necessary at all.

Q. 46. Is it necessary to stop the business of the bank in any degree to have a trial balance taken from the individual ledger and compared with the amount shown to be due individual depositors on the daily balance book or general ledger?

A. It is not necessary.

Q. 47. What case do you refer to in answer to question 34?

A. I refer to the case of Allen in the Capital City bank.

Q. 48. What is your understanding of the method in which Allen got the $16,000 or $17,000?

A. Allen was teller of the bank and as I understand it, he used the money deposited by customers and held back the deposit tickets.

Q. 49. Then his books, if they had been examined, would not have shown the shortage?

A. No, sir.

Q. 50. In answer to question 37 do you mean to be understood as saying that the finance committee has performed its duty 91 when it has compared assets of the bank with the statements furnished them by the clerks from the books?

A. No.

Q. —. Please explain what you mean.

A. The finance committee should compare the assets with the statements shown on the books themselves, and not the statements furnished by the clerks themselves.

Q. 52. Suppose in a bank having a capital stock of $50,000 and a surplus of $28,000, and the individual ledgers showed $19,000 more money due depositors than the daily balance book showed, and the finance committee should examine the bank, and not find this discrepancy, what would you say as to the carefulness of such an examination?

A. I should say that it was not a careful examination nor a thorough one.

Q. 53. Suppose in the same bank the notes and discounts on hand were less by $3,000 than the amount shown to be on hand by the daily balance book, and the executive committee or finance committee should not discover the difference in making an examination, what would you say as to the carefulness of such an examination?

A. I should say that that was neither careful nor thorough. Any discrepancy as high as $500 or $600 should be discovered in any kind of an examination.

CHAS. B. DUNCAN.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this the 15th day of April, 1895.

Endorsed: Filed May 14, 1895.

Deposition of Allen B. Fisher, Taken by Defendant.

Q. 1. State your residence and occupation.

A. Nashville; book-keeper.

Q. 2. How long have you been engaged in this business?

A. About seventeen years.

Q. 3. Are you thoroughly familiar with book-keeping in use in banks in this part of the country?

A. I am.

Q. 4. Is it or not customary for banks to take from individual ledgers a trial balance at stated intervals, and if so, how often?

A. It is—every two or three weeks.

92 Q. 5. Are these trial balances verified with any book, if so, which one?

A. With the balances on the general ledger.

Q. 6. Is there any way of telling the condition of the bank without doing this?

A. There is not.

Q. 7. What do you understand by one saying that the accounts of a man have been examined and verified?

A. I would understand it to mean that the accounts of the man to be examined, are to be taken and then proved to be correct from information received from other sources than the person whose accounts are being examined.

Q. 8. What bank, if any, are you now connected with?

A. The Union Bank and Trust Co.

Q. 9. How often does this bank require trial balances to be taken from the individual ledgers?

A. Every two weeks.

Q. 10. Did you examine the accounts of Schardt in the Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co. with McEwen and Jennings?

A. Yes, sir, I partially examined the books with Jennings during the year 1893, after the bank closed.

Q. 11. Did or not John Schardt from 1890 until the bank closed, keep a general ledger in that bank?

A. He did for some time before the bank closed, but I don't remember when he begun.

Q. 12. Suppose a statement had been made to you by the finance committee of that bank to the effect that they had examined and verified the accounts of Schardt, state what you would understand that to mean.

A. I would understand that to mean that a statement of the accounts of Schardt had been taken as a basis, and then this statement had been verified by outside and independent information.

Q. 13. Suppose that statement furnished by Schardt as the basis of the examination, had been false, could it or not have been shown to be false, by an examination such as you would understand could be made and is usually made in banks like that?

A. Yes, sir, it could have been shown to be false.

93 Q. 14. When the trial balance taken from the individual ledger does not agree with the balance shown to be due individual depositors on the general ledger, or the daily balance book, what is then done to correct it, and is there any way in which it can be corrected?

A. The work has to be gone over again until the error is found.

Q. 15. In order to keep the accounts correct in the bank, is it necessary that the general ledgers and the individual ledgers should at all times agree?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 16. If at any time a trial balance had been taken from the individual books in the Mechanics' bank, and compared with the amount shown to be due individual depositors on the books kept by Schardt would it or not have shown a discrepancy—that is, at any time after Schardt falsified his books?

A. It would.

Q. 17. Would this or not have led at once to the detection of the falsity of Schardt's books?

A. It would.

Q. 18. At any time after Schardt had falsified his books, would or not a statement made by a finance committee to the effect that they had examined and verified Schardt's accounts, be true, if they had failed to get a trial balance from the individual ledgers and compared that with the amount shown to be due depositors on the books kept by Schardt?

A. It would not.

Q. 19. Is there any other way in which the accounts of Schardt could have been verified or properly examined?

A. There was not.

Q. 20. How would it be possible for bank officers or committees to know the condition of the bank without taking a trial balance from the individual ledger?

A. They could not know the right condition of the bank.

Q. 21. Could they or not have known whether the accounts kept by Schardt were correct?

A. They could not.

ALLEN B. FISHER.

Endorsed: Filed May 15th, 1895. H. M. Doak, clerk, by E. L. Doak, D. C.

94 Deposition of John A. McEwen, Taken by the Defendant.

Q. 1. Were you a member of the executive committee of the com plainant bank during the years 1891 and 1892?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 2. Did you take an active part in the examination of the accounts of the teller, Schardt, during those years?

A. Yes, sir, I was there generally at every examination.

Q. 3. How were these examinations made?

A. They were made by a memorandum of all the papers carried from time to time, and checking those papers, and examining the securities on the papers, to see that they corresponded with the statement.

Q. 4. Who made the statement or memorandum with which you compared the securities?

A. That was made either by Mr. Schardt or his assistant at Mr. Schardt's dictation. Mr. Sykes was the cashier during those years and I think he furnished us the statement. Mr. Sykes was an expert book-keeper and that was the reason he was cashier.

Q. 5. Did you examine any of the books themselves kept by Schardt, or did you take the statement furnished by the cashier?

A. I took the statement furnished by the cashier. I was never there except a few minutes each day. Mr. Eatherly was there most of the time and I relied mostly upon his knowledge of the running of the bank.

Q. 6. Please state who composed the executive committee for the years 1891 and 1892.

A. The executive committee for 1891 was composed of F. O. Beasley, J. B. Richardson, J. M. Eatherly, W. T. Smith and myself. For the year 1892, it was composed of John Woodward, W. A. Lannom, Chas. Sykes, J. M. Eatherly and myself.

Q. 7. Is Mr. Lannom dead?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 8. Do you remember whether he was present during 95 the meetings of the executive committee at which examinations of accounts were made during the year 1892?

A. Yes, sir; he was at some of the meetings.

Q. 9. In making examinations of the bank were the examinations directed to ascertaining whether or not the employés of the bank were defaulters, or was it more particularly directed to an examination of the papers carried by the bank?

A. It was done for the protection of the bank, to see that the credits were correct, and that the collaterals were of proper value, and also to see that all papers entrusted to the bank were there.

Q. 10. During the years '91 and '92, were trial balances from the individual ledgers ever taken off?

A. That was left to Mr. Sykes. He was cashier of the bank, and being an expert book-keeper, I suppose he attended to that.

Q. 11. You never made inquiry to ascertain whether that was being done or not?

A. No, sir.

Q. 12. Was Mr. W. T. Smith present at these examinations?

A. I don't think he was.

Q. 13. Do you remember whether Judge Woodward was present in '92?

A. I think he was at one or two meetings, but we asked his advice on numerous occasions.

Q. 14. When did he sell his stock and sever his connection with the bank?

A. A short time previous to the closing up of the bank.

JOHN A. McEWEN.

Cross-examination of JOHN A. MCEWEN:

Q. 15. Were there always present of the finance committee, at least three of the members or more?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 16. I understand that the finance committee in addition
96 to its daily meetings looking after discounts, etc., also met quarterly to make examinations; am I correct in this?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 17. Please state how these quarterly examinations were made and had?

A. We counted all the money or things that represented money, such as cash tickets, checks on other banks, deposits in other banks, and compared this with the statement furnished us by the cashier or teller. Then we took possession of all notes, bills, time or demand loans or other papers showing an indebtedness to the bank, as well as collaterals attached, and did our best to ascertain the condition of the paper and the value of the collaterals. We compared this with the statement furnished by the cashier or teller of what should be in the bank of these kinds of papers, and also compared it with the daily balance book. As we had seen all notes or bills which had been discounted by the bank and these had been entered on the daily balance book, we would sometimes go back to it. We always took the cashier or teller's written statement of the deposit account; we hardly ever examined original entries of deposits, but accepted this statement as making a full and fair exhibit of these. We could not have examined original entries. There were several hundred depositors, and a great many small accounts with individuals; it would have taken all our time to have done this, and but few, if any of us, were book-keepers or accountants; we had to rely upon the honesty of the cashier for this. We did our best to ascertain the exact condition of the bank at the end of each quarter. The finance committee was the discount committee, and all paper approved by the committee was recognized by the committee at the quarterly examination. If we did not remember it we appealed to this book of original entries on the ticket. These quarterly examinations were of the same kind and character which all the banks of Nashville made, as we understood.

Q. 18. When did Schardt become cashier?

A. In January, 1893.

Q. 19. How was the attendance of the finance committee at the quarterly meeting?

A. Generally pretty full; we never commenced the examination until a majority or at least three members were present.

Q. 20. Was there a daily balance book kept, and were daily balances taken off?

A. Yes, sir.

97 Q. 21. What officers came before the committee and made such reports as were required?

A. The cashier, Mr. Sykes, down to some time in January, 1893. On the 25th of March, 1893, the Commercial National bank closed its doors, and on the following Monday, the 27th, we closed temporarily, and we opened again in the latter part of March, 1893. There was a run made on all the banks on the 27th of March, and we took advantage of a sixty-day clause in our savings bank charter, after remaining open a few minutes on the 27th. Rumors prevailed derogatory to the officers of the Commercial bank, and when we had borrowed $50,000, largely on the credit of the directors, we opened again in the latter part of March and brought into the bank an expert accountant, to take a full and complete account of everything which began pretty soon to develop that some one or more of our officers had not been honest, and on the 17th of April we became satisfied that the bank's loss had been so great that it could not stay open longer, and made an assignment.

Q. 22. Was there or not at any time a failure to have the examination of the bank's affairs and condition quarterly?

A. No, sir.

Q. 23. Were there any other examinations of the bank's condition, and the officer's books?

A. Yes, sir; every July and January of each year, the directors and finance committee made an examination into the affairs of the bank to ascertain its condition financially with a view to ascertaining the ability of the bank to pay a dividend. These examinations of the directors and finance committee were as thorough as we could make them.

Q. 24. When did John Schardt die?

A. April 17th, 1893, before we had ascertained the full amount of his embezzlement of the money of the bank, but when we had learned sufficiently to believe that he was involved to some extent.

Q. 25. Did you know the general character of John Schardt in Nashville, for honesty and integrity and truthfulness?

A. I did. I knew him from his boyhood.

Q. 26. Was it good or bad?

A. It was good—first-class. No young man had a better reputation for honesty or integrity or industry. He was attentive to his business, never losing a day for several years, and had the 98 reputation of being a pious and religious man, as well as very economical, and lived modestly and quietly.

EXPLANATION.—By cashier and teller's report, I mean the report or statement made out by our teller, who was also one of our bookkeepers. This report came through the hands of our cashier, approved by him, and was known to our committee as the cashier's report. The teller's work was merely clerical, the responsibility and accuracy of these reports or statements rested in our eyes, entirely upon our cashier, Mr. Sykes, in whom we had confidence.

JNO. A. McEWEN.

(Endorsed:) Filed May 15, 1895. H. M. Doak, clerk.

Deposition of J. B. Richardson, Taken by the Defendant.

Q. 1. Were you a member of the executive committee of complainant bank for the year 1891?

A. I was.

Q. 2. Were you present at the examinations made by the committee of the accounts of John Schardt during the year 1891?

A. I couldn't say positively whether I was or not.

Q. 3. Do you remember of ever being present prior to January, 1893, at any of the examinations of his accounts?

A. I was frequently present at the examination of the accounts of the bank.

Q. 4. What do you mean by the accounts of the bank?

A. I mean the securities, stocks, bonds, individual accounts of the employés of the bank, and all accounts kept in the bank.

Q. 5. How did you examine the accounts of Schardt while he was teller?

A. The cash was generally counted; cash tickets examined, and a general balance made.

Q. 6. How did you examine the account on his book showing the amount due individual depositors?

A. There was a daily balance-sheet which showed all the assets and liabilities of the bank, including the amount due individual depositors.

Q. 7. Did you take this daily balance-sheet as a basis of examination?

99 A. It was generally conceded as a basis of the status of the business.

Q. 8. How did you examine the amount shown to be due individual depositors on this daily balance-sheet?

A. I don't remember of the committee ever having gone through the books and itemizing the individual deposits. This balance-sheet was taken as a true representation of those deposits.

Q. 9. Then coming back to my question—how did you examine the accounts of Schardt?

A. Schardt was teller at the time, and it was not considered absolutely essential by me or by the committee to go minutely into the general books outside of an examination of his cash account, and all items that were paid out.

Q. 10. Then do I understand you to say that you accepted the amount shown on the daily balance-sheet to be due individual depositors to be correct without further examination?

A. No, I can't say that. The books were frequently gone over by the committee in a general way, and anything they might have come across that would have been unsound would have necessarily aroused suspicion.

Q. 11. Were you ever present when the committee went over the general books of the bank prior to January, 1893?

A. I can't call to mind any specific time, but I was very actively engaged in the affairs of the bank at this time, and frequently met the committee and advised with them, and even went through the books with them.

Q. 12. Please state concisely how you examined and verified the amount on the daily balance-sheet shown to be due individual depositors?

A. I have sufficiently answered that question before.

Q. 13. Has anything wrong ever been discovered with the individual ledgers showing the accounts of the depositors in detail?

A. I understand that the expert examiner, Mr. McEwen, states that there was nothing wrong with the individual ledgers.

Q. 14. Did your committee at any time ask for or see a trial balance from the individual ledgers?

A. My recollection is they did.

Q. 15. With reference to what date are you now speaking?

A. 1891.

100 Q. 16. Did you compare this trial balance from the individual ledgers with the amount shown to be due individual depositors on the general ledger?

A. I don't remember, but I suppose it was.

Q. 17. Have you any recollection upon this point?

A. No, I couldn't state positively.

Q. 18. Do you remember assisting the executive committee during the year 1891 in making an examination of Schardt's accounts?

A. I was very actively interested in the bank and attended the meetings of the board of directors and executive committee very promptly, and it is my impression that I was present at times when the examination was going on in 1891.

Q. 19. Did you assist the committee in making these examinations of Schardt's accounts?

A. I can't say that I did assist them in every examination, but I am under the impression that I did in one or two instances.

Q. 20. Do you remember of being present and assisting in the examination made in December, 1891?

A. I do not. I may have been there, but I can't call it to mind.

Q. 21. Do you remember during the year of 1891 of having, at any time, counted the notes on hand and compared them with the note register?

A. I answer that question the same as above.

Q. 22. My question was with reference to the one branch of the examination, viz: with respect to counting the notes and comparing them with the note register.

A. I don't remember whether I was there or not at all times.

Q. 23. As I understand you, you cannot recall whether this was done or not?

A. It was done, but I cannot name the exact time when I was present. I am satisfied that I was present at the examinations more than one time.

Cross-examination of J. B. RICHARDSON:

Q. 1. Who constituted the finance committee in 1891?

A. J. M. Eatherly, Jno. A. McEwen, Wm. T. Smith and F. O. Beasley and I.

Q. 2. How frequently did you attend?

A. I am unable to state the exact times that I was absent; I was very much interested in the bank, and gave it a great deal of my time and attention. For some purposes, such as passing upon paper tendered for discount, the finance committee met 101 almost daily. These are the meetings that I did not attend daily. My best recollection is that I attended the quarterly meetings uniformly, though one may have occurred when I was North buying goods, though I have now no recollection that such was the case.

Q. 3. Now, please state in what mode and to what extent examinations were made by this committee quarterly?

A. At these meetings there was always present, either all of the committee, or if not all, certainly three of us were present before we commenced the examination. We always counted the cash, and cash items, all notes, time or demand loans, bills and every paper due the bank was produced and examined, credits on the back of each taken off—all collaterals examined and estimated values put upon the collaterals, all aggregated and compared with the daily trial balance book. The daily balance of individual deposits and certified checks and bills payable as shown on the daily balance-sheet as exhibited by the cashier were examined. We did not go to original entries in the individual ledger, but accepted the statement in writing of the cashier for this. To have gone to original items and added up columns would have required an enormous expense, and much more time than could have been given it by directors or its committees, and it is not the custom or habit of committees to examine original items and entries, I understand, in this respect, but to accept the written statements of the cashier as correct. In addition to this we individually would, at times, go into the bank and look over the individual ledger in a general way as well as the general ledger. I did this and have seen others do it. In addition to this, the cashier would make semi-annual reports to the directors, which were examined. These reports accorded with the results of the quarterly reports, and were passed on by the board of directors. These reports related to the general condition of the bank showing its financial status and what had been made, and what had been lost during the preceding six months, and showed in general detail, the facts upon which such a result was obtained. It purported to be a complete report in every respect, and upon this depended the ability of the bank to declare and pay a dividend or not.

Q. 4. Did you know the reputation of John Schardt for honesty and integrity?

A. I did.

Q. 5. Was it good or bad?

102 A. Good, excellent; was regarded as one of the best young men in Nashville, and was the most attentive man to his business I ever knew.

Endorsed: Filed May 15, '95. H. M. Doak, clerk.

Deposition of Theo. Cooley, Taken by Defendant.

Q. 1. State your age, residence and occupation?

A. I am fifty-two years of age, live in Nashville, Tenn., and am the general agent of the defendant company at Nashville, Tenn.

Q. 2. How long have you been representing the guarantee company?

A. Twelve years.

Q. 3. Did the defendant company at any time cancel its bond on John Schardt, while he was cashier of the complainant company, if so, when, and for what reason?

A. Yes, sir; the company did cancel its bond through me as its agent, the Saturday before the bank assigned on Monday. The cause which led to this action was that I had ascertained that John Schardt had been speculating in futures, and I so reported to the bank when the bond was cancelled.

Q. 4. Does or not the company bond persons holding a fiduciary position who speculate?

A. No, sir.

Q. 5. Why not?

A. Because we have found by experience that no man who handles trust funds and speculates in futures is a safe risk.

Q. 6. Is it a material inquiry or fact to be known by by the guarantee company as to whether or not the applicant for a bond has been speculating?

A. Yes, sir; it is a material fact to be known, and one which the company always requires to be answered before issuing the bond.

Q. 7. If the fact is disclosed that the applicant is or has been speculating, does the company issue a bond upon him?

A. It does not, unless the applicant gives satisfactory assurances that he has ceased to do so, and the company believes he will not do so in the future.

Q. 8. How long has this been the custom of the company?

A. Ever since I have been connected with it. How much longer I do not know.

103 Q. 9. Did you know or hear of Schardt's speculations prior to the time mentioned above when you received such information?

A. I did not.

Q. 10. Have all matters pertaining to the issuance of the bonds upon Schardt in favor of the complainant passed through your hands as the representative of the company?

A. They have so far as I know.

Q. 11. Is it or not a part of your duties to gather information concerning applicants for bonds and about persons already bonded in the defendant company, in this part of the country?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 12. Do you transmit such information to the home office of the company?

A. I do.

Q. 13. If the company had received any information with respect to Schardt's speculations, or other information unfavorable to him, would you have been advised of the fact by the company?

A. I would, as that is the usual method of doing business.

Q. 14. Have you ever had any experience in a bank, if so, how much?

A. Before I became the representative of the defendant company, I had occupied several positions in a bank, the last being that of cashier.

Q. 15. Does the company or not, before renewing a bond upon an employé in a bank, require the bank to certify that the applicant's books and accounts have been examined and verified?

A. It does.

Q. 16. Is this a material fact for the company to know?

A. It is most material, because the company never renews the bond of an employé whose accounts and books have not been examined and found correct.

Q. 17. Why is this so?

A. The principal reason is that the company is not willing to remain on the bond of any one whose books and accounts are not examined at least once a year, because after that time it is so very difficult to ascertain accurately whether there has been any default, and unless the accounts and books show that the applicant has been honest, the company does not want to continue upon his bond, 104 but deems it an improper risk for it to carry and deems it best for the employer to know whether or not his employé is honest.

Q. 18. Were such statements made by the complainant bank at the end of each year during the currency of the bond upon Schardt as teller in the bank?

A. They were.

Q. 19. Was the renewal issued upon the faith of the statements being true?

A. Certainly so. If the bank had certified that the accounts had been verified, or had certified that they had been found incorrect, the company would not have renewed his bond.

Q. 20. What do you understand is meant by saying that the books and accounts of a person have been examined and verified?

A. I understand it to mean that the books and accounts have been examined in the usual manner of examining such books, and that they have then been verified by such evidence as is usually applied to the verification of similiar accounts or books by the persons who are charged with making such examinations and verifications.

Q. 21. Can such verification ever be made by accepting the statement of the person whose books and accounts are under examination? Either as to the whole or any part of the same?

A. Certainly not.

Q. 22. Did you tender to J. J. Prior, assignee, the premium received by the company for the issuance of the bond upon Schardt as cashier of the complainant bank?

A. I did.

Q. 23. Prior to the assignment of the bank did you ever hear or know of any defalcation, or wrongdoing, upon the part of any employé of the complainant bank?

A. No, sir, except as above stated with respect to Schardt speculating, which I found out a few days before the bank assigned.

THEO. COOLEY.

Q. 23. Is it a material fact to be known before bonding an applicant, whether or not there has been a shortage or defalcation in the position for which the bond is asked?

A. It is very material.

Q. 24. Why is it material?

A. Because the company before issuing the bond desires to 105 know whether or not there are proper safeguards thrown around the position to prevent a defalcation; whether or not the officers or employers have exercised due diligence in preventing or detecting a defalcation; and whether or not experience has shown the place to be a proper risk for the company to take, or whether or not they are competent to exercise a proper supervision over the employés of the institution with which they are connected.

Q. 25. Did Schardt leave any estate when he died?

A. No.

Q. 26. What did he do with all the money he abstracted from the bank?

A. It is generally understood that he lost it speculating in produce and stocks.

THEO. C.

Cross-examination of THEO. COOLEY:

Q. What day of the month did you make the alleged cancellation of the bond, and what bond?

A. I think it was the 15th of April, 1893, and Schardt's bond as cashier.

Q. 2. How long after this before Schardt died?

A. I think he died on the Monday night following the Saturday morning that we went off of his bond.

Q. 3. When did you tender the money to Pryor, assignee?

A. December 28th, 1893.

Q. 4. Did you for and on behalf of defendant company keep a detective or other person or persons to look after the habit- of such persons as bonds had been given for?

A. We had no detective in this case. I got information from outside parties regarding Mr. Schardt. In the performance of my duties I sometimes get detectives to follow the habits of parties we have bonded.

Q. 5. Have you resided in this community all your life?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. 6. Have you stated your experience as a bank officer? Now, does the keeper of the individual or general ledger of depositors have the handling of money or are they simply book-keepers?

A. They are simply book-keepers and are not expected to handle the funds of the bank.

Q. 7. How long have you had charge of the defendant corporation's affairs in Nashville, and in what position?

106 A. Since 1882 as near as I can remember; as its general agent.

Q. 8. Has the company a local or branch board located in Nashville?

A. Yes, sir.

MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST CO., for the Use of JAMES J. PRYOR, Assignee, vs.
GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA et als.
} In Equity.

In this cause it is stipulated that the following are facts and may be used by the defendant company as evidence on its behalf, as fully and completely as if such facts had been proven in the usual and customary way:

The defendant is a corporation organized under the laws of the Dominion of Canada for the purpose of furnishing bonds of suretyship and guarantee; and has been engaged in business in Canada and the United States since 1872.

Said company issued the bond in suit on John Schardt as teller and collector to the complainant bank in January, 1888, and the same was kept in force by renewal receipts until January, 1893.

The bond in suit on said Schardt as cashier, was issued to said bank in January, 1893, and remained in force until the bank assigned and until the death of said Schardt.

In the teller's bond a statement is referred to as having 108 been delivered to the defendant company by the bank; said statement was in fact delivered to the company before the issuance of the bond and is signed by C. W. Peden as cashier, dated in January, 1888, and the teller's bond was issued to said bank upon the receipt of said statement. Which said statement is as follows:

Proposal No. —. Amount, $—.

The Guarantee Company of North America.

(Established 1872.)

Head office, Montreal.

SIR: An application having been made to this company to issue bond of security for Mr. John Schardt, of Nashville, Tenn., in the service of your bank, to the amount of $10,000.00, the company, in order to decide upon his application for said bond, desires to have answers to the following questions, as fully and definitely as possible on behalf of the said bank. The directors trust to the co-operation of employers in giving every information in their power, and any points known to the employer, and not brought out in the questions below, they earnestly ask the employer to communicate, so that any information affecting the applicant's past or present history, however slight, may be thoroughly sifted, to the interest and protection of all concerned.

I am, sir, yours obediently,

EDWARD RAWLINGS,
Managing Director.

111 Said teller's bond was renewed each year to January, 1893, and in each year before the bond was renewed the defendant company furnished the complainant bank with a blank form to be filled out which provided as follows:

"It is necessary before the bond can be renewed that you obtain the certificate on the back hereof by your president or cashier and on its return with remittance of the premium, the renewal can be immediately effected."

The certificate on the back was filled up and signed by the cashier and among other things it stated, that the accounts of said teller, Schardt, had been examined and verified by the finance committee of said bank, and the bond was not renewed any year until this certificate had been made out and delivered to the defendant company.

The defendant company executed and delivered said cashier's bond to said bank, to begin from January 1, 1893, but was issued after the 10, 1893, and the statement referred to therein as bearing date January 10, 1893, No. 154,806, and signed by Lewis T. Baxter, president, and designated as employer's guarantee. Proposal was in fact executed and delivered to the defendant company before the issuance of said bond, and was as follows:

The following proposal was filed:

Proposal No. —. Amount, $20,000.00.

The Guarantee Company of North America.

(Established 1872.)

114 That the bank closed its doors, and made an assignment for the equal and pro rata benefit of all its creditors to Jas. J. Pryor, assignee, on the 17th day of April, 1893, and he has accepted the trust.

That notice was given to the defendant according to requirements of bond for cashier and teller on the 20th day of April, 1893, and proof of loss made to said company, according to the terms of said bond.

That no exceptions are taken to the notice or proof of loss in respect to the bond as cashier, and none will be urged upon the court at the trial. It is further agreed that this suit was commenced April 9, 1894.

That before the first day of May, 1893, Jas. J. Pryor, assignee, by written request made to the company through its general agent, Theo. Cooley, at Nashville, to assist either personally or by expert in the examination of the accounts of said Schardt, and the same was refused by letter of May 1, 1893.

Either party may use on the trial such parts of the applications for the two bonds as may be deemed necessary.

An opinion of the court was filed for which see Federal Reporter No. 68.

The following final decree was made and entered, viz:

This cause was heard at a previous day of the term, and the court took an advisement to this day. The cause having been heard upon the original bill, answer, stipulations and proof, as well as upon argument of counsel. One of the stipulations is as follows:

"It is stipulated and agreed in this case that should any court that hold this case, on its removal to the Federal court from the State court, should be put upon the law docket, a jury is expressly waived, and the same shall be heard and decided by the court without the intervention of a jury, and upon its merits, without 115 regard to the form of the pleadings, and that the issues made in the pleadings, as they stand, shall constitute the issues to be tried by the court; also that all captions and certificates to depositions are waived, as well as the fact that some of the depositions are not subscribed or sworn to."

The court is of opinion and adjudges and decrees as follows:

That Schardt has been a defaulter within the sense of his two bonds; that in the years 1890 and 1891 the amount of his embezzlement from the bank was comparatively small and has been paid out of assets and collections theretofore transferred to the bank by Schardt to secure it, just before his death; that the embezzlements for the year commencing September 1st, 1890, to January 16th, 1891, amounted in the aggregate to $5,879.34 with interest to April 15th, 1893, of $890.04, makes $6,769.38. From January 16th, 1891, to January 1st, 1892, $22,290.00, interest to April 15th, 1893, of $2,299.08, added, makes $24,589.08. From January 1st, 1892, to January 1st, 1893, $50,649.90, with interest to April 15th, 1893, of $2,086.27 added, makes $52,736.17; and these from January 1st, 1893, to April 17th, 1893, during the currency of his said bond as cashier, to $22,964.17, which, with interest to April 15th, 1893, of $164.52, makes the sum of $23,128.69, in the aggregate; and that the total amount of said embezzlements during all the years menti-ned in both positions, was of principal, $101,783.41, which, with interest to April 15th, 1893, of $5,439.91 added, makes an aggregate of $107,223.36.

It appearing that Schardt had assigned to the bank to indemnify it against loss, 2 lots of land assigned to J. B. Richardson and life-insurance policies amounting to $80,000.00, some of which policies have been paid to the assignee without suit, and others are now in litigation in this court, or pending on appeal or writ of error to the appellate court of this circuit, held at Cincinnati, the court adjudges upon inspection of said guaranty bonds, their terms and various conditions, and the proof submitted, that the bank has complied with the same and all its undertakings thereunder, substantially; and that said Schardt embezzled and fraudulently appropriated the moneys of the bank while he filled said two positions, to the amounts named; and that interest should be calculated upon said sums from the end of his respective terms.

The court, after considering the various and numerous defenses set up by defendant company, why a recovery should not be 116 had upon either of said bonds, or both, in favor of complainant, is pleased to disallow each and all of said defenses, and to order, adjudge and decree that complainant have its decree or judgment against the defendant, The Guarantee Company, upon each of said bonds with interest from the time the same should have been paid according to the terms of said bonds, and for the costs.

That complainant have judgment on the teller's and collector's bond for the sum of ten thousand dollars principal and the further sum of seven hundred and seventy dollars, being interest at six per cent. from 9th of April, 1894, to July 1st, 1895; and that complainant have judgment on the cashier's bond against defendant Guarantee Company for the sum of twenty thousand dollars principal and the further sum of $1,540.00 interest thereon from April 9th, 1894, to July 1st, 1895, making in the aggregate of principal and interest on both bonds the sum of thirty-two thousand three hundred and ten dollars ($32,310.00) with interest thereon until paid and the costs of this suit.

And the court orders and decrees that the liability of the defendant, The Guarantee Company, is secondary to that of John Schardt's estate; and that the bank or its assignee shall account for all collections realized on assets or collaterals turned over to the bank by said Schardt to reimburse it against his shortage, which it has collected, or with due diligence may collect hereafter; and for his fitness, and for convenience, H. M. Doak, is appointed master commissioner to report the same to the next term of this court; and the court orders that the same be applied to the shortage of said Schardt in the order in which the same occurred and in the meantime no execution will issue against defendants for the same, but only for the costs; and the court orders that this cause may be continued upon the docket of this court, for the purpose only of making any orders necessary to apply all collections from assets of Schardt, held as collateral, in exoneration, to that extent, of the defendant company and of substituting the defendant to the rights of the bank, in case the recovery herein is collected or paid and any of said assets remain above the amount necessary to satisfy the shortage. But the case is retained for no other purpose, and the decree against defendant company is final as fixing its liability on the bonds to make good the shortage, whatever that may be. This decree is entered in lieu of one entered at a former day of the term and the decree formerly entered is hereby vacated.

117 The following petition for and allowance of appeal was filed on August 1st, 1895:

MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST CO., to Use of J. J. PRYOR, Assignee, vs.
GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA.

The above-named defendant, The Guarantee Company of North America, conceiving itself aggrieved by the final decree entered on July 1st, 1895, in the above-entitled proceeding and because of manifest errors therein, as is more fully shown and set forth in an assignment of errors this day filed, doth hereby appeal from said decree to the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit; and it prays that its appeal may be allowed and that a transcript of the record and proceedings and papers upon which said decree was made, duly authenticated may be sent to the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit.

GRANBERY & MARKS,
Solicitors for Petitioner.

And now, to wit, on the 18th day of August, 1895, it is ordered that the appeal be allowed as prayed for.

C. D. CLARK, Judge.

The following assignment of errors was filed August 1, 1895, to wit:

Now, to wit, on the 1st day of August, in the year of our Lord 1895, at the April term of the circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee, in the city of Nashville, State of Tennessee, comes the said Guarantee Company of North America, by Granbery & Marks, its solicitors, and says that in the record and proceedings in the above-styled matter there is manifest error in this, to wit:

I.

In re Cashier's Bond.

1. The court erred in not sustaining the defense of a fraudulent and material misrepresentation by which the said bond was procured, such misrepresentation being that the books and accounts of said employé had been examined and found correct December, 1892.

118 2. The court erred in not sustaining the further defense of a fraudulent and material misrepresentation as to there having been no default by a former cashier in the bank.

3. The court erred in not sustaining the defense of a suppression of material matters affecting the risk, to wit: the fact that said employé had been known to have engaged in speculation and to have owned an interest in a brokerage concern while the teller of said bank.

4. The court erred in holding defendant liable for $5,992.35 of overdrafts by customers of the bank, because the defendant only contracted to pay losses occasioned by the fraudulent acts of said employé and constituting larceny or embezzlement.

5. The court erred in holding that said bond was ever in force or ever took effect.

6. The court erred in not sustaining the defense of the bank permitting the employé to occupy a dual position while he was bonded in one position, and thereby materially enabling such employé to abstract the funds of the bank and conceal the same, and subjecting him to much greater temptations to abstract the funds of the bank.

7. The court erred in not sustaining the above defenses and in not dismissing the bill.

II.

In re Teller's Bond.

1. The court erred in not sustaining the defense of a material and fraudulent misrepresentation made by the complainant bank to procure a renewal of said bond in January, 1892, said misrepresentation being that the books and accounts of the employé Schardt had been examined in December, 1891, and verified.

2. The court erred in not sustaining the defense of a failure on the part of the bank to notify the defendant of speculation by said employé during the currency of the bond.

3. The court erred in not sustaining the defense of the failure of the bank to cause to be observed all due and customary supervision of said employé to prevent a default during the currency of the bond.

4. The court erred in not sustaining the defense of the 119 failure of the bank to make a proper inspection or audit of the books and accounts of said employé once each year during the currency of the bond.

5. The court erred in not sustaining the defense that the bond provides for the payment of such losses only as are discovered during the currency of the bond, where the employé does not sooner leave the service.

6. The court erred in not sustaining the defense of the bank permitting the employé to occupy a dual position while he was bonded in one position, and thereby materially enabling such employé to abstract the funds of the bank and conceal the same, and in subjecting him to much greater temptation to abstract the funds of the bank.

7. The court erred in not dismissing the bill as to said bond.

8. The court erred in holding that interest should be computed upon each default prior to the time the same was discovered, notice given and proper steps taken under the bonds to mature a liability against the defendant.

Wherefore the said Guarantee Company of North America prays that an appeal may be allowed it from said decree holding it liable on said bonds to the end that said decree may be corrected and speedy justice done it.

United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Sixth Judicial Circuit, } ss:

To the Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, for the use of J. J. Pryor, assignee, Greeting:

You are hereby cited and admonished to be and appear at a session of the United States circuit court of appeals to be holden at the city of Cincinnati in said circuit on the 20th day of September next pursuant to an appeal filed in the clerk's office of the circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee, wherein

The Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, to use, 120 etc., is complainant, and Guarantee Company of North America is defendant, to show cause, if any there be, why the decree rendered against the said defendant should not be corrected and speedy justice done to the parties in that behalf.

Witness the Hon. Melville W. Fuller, Chief Justice of the United States, this August 22, 1895, and of American Independence the 120th year.

CHAS. D. CLARK, Judge.

Endorsed: The undersigned Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company and J. J. Pryor, assignee, do hereby acknowledge service of the foregoing citation on appeal this August 22, 1895. Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co. Jas. J. Pryor, assignee, by Edwin H. East, solicitor.

The following bond for appeal was executed and filed, viz:

Know all men by these presents that we, The Guarantee Cumpany of North America as principal and W. L. Granberry as surety, are held and firmly bound unto The Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Co. for the use of J. J. Pryor, assignee, in the full and just sum of $250.00, to be paid the said Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Co., to use, etc., certain attorneys, executors, administrators, or assigns; to which payment well and truly to be made we bind ourselves, our heirs and personal representatives, jointly and severally by these presents.

Sealed with our seals and dated this August 18, 1895.

Whereas lately at a circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee, in a suit depending in said court between the first party and the second party, a decree was rendered against the first party, and the said party having prayed and obtained an appeal and filed a copy thereof in the clerk's office of said court to reverse the decree in the aforesaid suit and a citation directed to the second party, citing and admonishing it to be and appear at a session of the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, to be holden at the city of Cincinnati in said circuit on the 20th day of September, 1895, next:

Now the condition of the above obligation is such that if the said defendant shall prosecute its appeal to effect and answer all 121 damages and costs if it fail to make its plea good, then the above obligation to be void; otherwise to remain in full force and virtue.

And afterwards, to wit, on the 5th day of October, 1896, the following opinion was filed:

124 United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit.

THE GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA, Appellant,
v.
THE MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST Company, for the Use of James J. Pryor, Assignee, Appellee.

No. 349. Appeal from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Tennessee.

Submitted December 12, 1895. Decided October 5, 1896.

Before Taft and Lurton, circuit judges, and Hammond, district judge.

This was a bill in equity filed in the chancery court of Davidson county, Tennessee, by the assignee for the benefit of creditors of the Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Company, against the Union Bank & Trust Company, administrator of John Schardt, deceased, a corporation of Tennessee, and the Guarantee Company of North America, a corporation of Canada, to state an account between the bank and John Schardt, its deceased cashier and teller, to obtain a decree properly applying certain credits to the debt in favor of Schardt, and to recover the balance found to be owed by Schardt to the bank, from the guarantee company on two bonds or fidelity insurance contracts entered into by Schardt and the guarantee company with the bank indemnifying it from loss by the dishonesty of Schardt, one covering his dishonest acts while he was teller of the bank and the other for his dishonest acts while he was its cashier. The guarantee company removed the cause to the court below on the ground that there was in the case a separable controversy between the complainant, a citizen of Tennessee, and the guarantee company, an alien corporation. The bonds sued on were joint and several obligations of Schardt and the guarantee company. Schardt's administrator demurred to the bill for want of equity in the State court and the record shows no further proceeding against it. No motion to remand was made and the cause proceeded in the court below against the guarantee company alone, the two parties stipulating that the cause should be heard in equity or if removed to the law docket that a jury should be waived and trial had to the court.

Schardt was teller of the bank from January 16, 1888, until 125 January 1, 1893. He was cashier from January, 1893, until his death, April 17, 1893. The bond covering his acts as teller was given in 1888 for a year and was renewed from year to year until January, 1896, when a new bond covering his acts as cashier was given. The teller's bond recited that the bank had delivered to the guarantee company a certain statement and that it was agreed and understood that the statement constituted an essential part of the contract of indemnity. In consideration of $100 a year the company then agreed to make good and reimburse to the employer such pecuniary loss as the employer shall have sustained by the fraudulent acts of the employé in connection with the duties of his said office or position or with any other duties assigned to him by the employer in the said service, committed by him and discovered during the continuance of this bond and within six months from the employé's ceasing to be in the said service. The bond provided further that:

"The following provisions are also to be observed and binding as a part of this bond: That this bond is issued and renewed on the express understanding that the employé has not within the knowledge of the said employer at any further period either in this or other employment been guilty of any default or serious dereliction of duty.

"That the employer shall observe or cause to be observed all due and customary supervision over the said employé for the prevention of default, and if the employer shall at any time during the currency of this bond condone any act or default on the part of the employé which would give the employer the right to claim hereunder, and shall continue the employé in his service, without notification to the company the said company will not be responsible hereunto for any default which may occur subsequent to said act or default of said employé so condoned.

"That the employer shall at once notify the company on his becoming aware of the said employé being engaged in speculation or gambling or indulging in any disreputable or unlawful habits of pursuits.

"That there shall be an inspection or audit of the accounts or books of the employé on behalf of the employer at least once in every twelve months from the date of this bond.

"That the company shall not in anywise be responsible to the employer under this bond to a greater extent than ten thousand dollars."

By another provision Schardt agreed to keep the company harmless from any payment it might have to make under the bond. The bond is signed by Schardt, the guarantee company and the bank.

The statement referred to in the bond contained twenty questions and answers concerning the bank's knowledge of Schardt's integrity and past business life, the character of supervision to which he was subjected in discharging his duties and the salary paid him. Of these the following only are material here:

7. When was the last inspection of the office at which he was stationed made?

A. December 24, 1887.

8. What is your custom in regard to the frequency of in-126 spections? Are they at stated periods or irregular, and what is the longest time allowed to elapse between inspections?

A. Every quarter.

9. Has the bank a duly appointed and authorized inspector or inspectors? If not, by whom are the inspections made?

A. The finance committee.

18. In the event of the employer filling the post of teller, how often and by what officer will the teller's cash be checked and counted?

A. By the finance committee; quarterly.

At the end of each year of the bond the bank received the following notice:

"It is necessary before the bond can be renewed that you obtain the certificate on the back hereof by your president or cashier and on its return with the remittance of the premium, the renewal can be immediately effected."

The certificate was accordingly filled up and signed by the cashier of the bank at each renewal. Among other things it stated that the accounts of Schardt, the teller, had been examined and verified by the finance committee of the bank. On such certificate the bond was renewed.

The cashier's bond was given in January, 1893. By its terms Schardt and the company, the latter relying on a certain guarantee proposal signed by the president of the bank and on its strict performance and observance thereafter, bound themselves jointly and severally in the sum of $20,000 to reimburse the bank to the extent of $20,000 for any loss sustained through Schardt's act or fraud in connection with his duties as cashier and constituting embezzlement or larceny. The bond was made subject to certain conditions endorsed on it among which were the following:

1. Any misstatement of a material fact in the declaration within mentioned or in any claim made under this bond will render this bond void from the beginning.

2. That the said employer shall use all due and customary diligence in the supervision of said employé for the prevention of default and to that end shall cause an inspection of his accounts to be made at least once within twelve months.

The guarantee proposal contained nineteen questions concerning Schardt and circumstances of supervision, etc.

Of these only the following are material:

Q. 4. Have you known or heard anything unfavorable as to his habits or associations, past or present? Or of any matter concerning him about which you deem it advisable for the company to make inquiry?

A. No.

Q. 12. Has there been any default in the bank by any employé in applicant's position?

A. No.

Q. 13. When were applicant's books and accounts (including cash, securities and vouchers, if any), last examined and by whom?

127 A. December 31, 1892, by finance committee of bank, (were they found correct?) and found correct.

Q. 14. In case of applicant handling cash or securities, how often will the same be examined and compared with the books, accounts and vouchers, and by whom?

A. Not less than quarterly and often monthly by finance committee.

The above answers and representations are true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

This was signed by the president of the bank. While Schardt was teller he kept the general ledger and the cash book and made the daily statement of the bank. A clerk kept the individual ledger. The individual ledger was correctly kept. Whenever Schardt abstracted money from the deposits he would place the items correctly in the cash book, but he would make false totals less by the amount he had taken than the true total and these false totals he would transfer to the individual deposit account on the general ledger. Until 1890 it had been the practice in the bank every month to take trial balances of the individual ledger accounts and verify the balances thus shown with those of the general ledger. Schardt directed the clerk to discontinue this and thereafter from 1890 until the collapse of the bank no balance was ever taken from the individual ledger and no comparison was ever made between Schardt's balances as shown by the general ledger and those which could have been shown by the individual ledger. These two ledgers were out of balance $2,098 Jan. 16, 1891, $19,600 Jan. 1, 1892, and $69,700 Jan. 1, 1893. The discrepancies were caused by Schardt's embezzlement of the deposits. In addition to this amount Schardt embezzled $3,765.44 in the year between January, 1891, and January, 1892, and $4,015.44 in the year between January 1, 1892, and January 1, 1893, of money received by him from the proceeds of notes due the bank and in his custody for collection. The finance committee of the board of directors of the bank made quarterly examinations of the bank. These examinations consisted of checking over a statement made by Schardt of the condition of the bank with the notes and securities and cash which he produced, and with statements from other banks of credit balances. There is some doubt as to whether the finance committee saw the cash book or what purported to be a copy of a statement taken from it. The evidence of the experts is that the account of bills payable shown on the cash book and ledger is correct, indeed that every account except the individual deposit account on those books is correct. Neither the finance committee nor the cashier ever asked for a trial balance from the individual ledgers. After January 1, 1893, when Schardt became cashier, he continued his thefts and between that date and April 17, 1893, the date of his death, he stole $22,964.17 more, so that his total stealings amounted to more than $100,000, or double the entire capital of the bank. It was in evidence that it was the universal banking custom in banks, large and small, to take trial balances from the individual ledgers at least once 128 a month and often every two weeks and to compare these balances with those of the general ledger. A trial balance of the individual ledgers might have been taken by a clerk in one or two days.

It is in evidence that information came to the president and directors of the bank through their cashier that Schardt was a partner in what is called "a bucket shop," an agency for promoting speculation in small amounts upon the fluctuations of stocks, grain, cotton and other commodities in which speculative gambling is done, and that he was himself speculating. When charged with this Schardt admitted that he had taken an interest in such a partnership but that he had sold out. He called his former partners to confirm his statement in this regard. He also admitted, according to one of the witnesses, at another time, that he had speculated to some extent but asserted that he had always made gains and had seen the error of his ways and had stopped. Subsequently the cashier received an anonymous letter stating that Schardt was still speculating. He informed the president of the bank. Schardt said it was a lie and no more attention was paid to it. All this occurred prior to the time when the president signed the guarantee proposal for the cashier's bond referred to. As a matter of fact Schardt was speculating all the time, and lost the $100,000 he had stolen in gambling in futures.

HAMMOND, district judge, delivered the opinion of the court.

The first question which arises on this record is one of jurisdiction. Was there a separable controversy between the plaintiff, a citizen of Tennessee, and the guarantee company, an alien corporation? The contracts upon which the action was founded were somewhat different in form. In the bond for Schardt as cashier there is no provision by which Schardt assumes an obligation directly to the bank for his own defalcations. He seems to be made a party merely that he may enter into certain obligations to the guarantee company in case of his defalcation. It can hardly be said therefore that the guarantee company's liability to the bank is joint with that of Schardt. In the teller's bond, however, the obligation of Schardt and the guarantee company is joint and several. In suit upon the latter, therefore, the bank and its assignee had the option to begin its action against the obligees jointly or separately and the obligee could not control the form of the action in this regard. Therefore it could not be removed as a separable controversy by the guarantee company when Schardt was its codefendant against the objection of the plaintiff. Of course the plaintiff could if it chose at any time dismiss Schardt's representatives from the suit and make it a several suit against the company. By making no objection to the removal, by making no motion to remand, and by proceeding to trial without protest and taking a separate judgment against the guarantee company we must hold that it consented to a severance of the joint action into two several actions, one against Schardt which seems to have remained in the State court or to have 129 been dismissed, and the other against the guarantee company of which the court below might properly take jurisdiction on the ground of diverse citizenship. Of course consent cannot give jurisdiction to the Federal court over an action not cognizable therein, but when it is cognizable as its form is joint or several, and a party has the option to treat it as either, we think in order to maintain the jurisdiction when it has been exercised, without objection from him, that he should be held to have elected to treat the action as several as of the time when the removal was affected. Where a petition for removal is filed after the time required by law and no objection is made before trial, the defect is waived.

Martin's Adm'r v. B. & O. R'y Co., 149 U. S.

By analogy in such a case as this where it is completely within the power of a party to frame or change his action so as to be cognizable in the Federal court, and by his silence and affirmative conduct avoids any question of the jurisdiction and proceeds to trial, he does thereby elect to change his action to one within the court's jurisdiction.

The next question is also one not raised by the parties but one to which the court must refer. This is a bill in equity to recover on a contract of fidelity insurance. Equitable jurisdiction was asserted in the bill on the ground that the determination of the liability of the defendant involved the examination of a complicated account not conveniently to be examined in a court of law and also on the ground that there were quite a number of credits to be allowed the defendant in the account, the proper mode of applying which required the action of a chancellor. A stipulation filed in the case above shows that both parties preferred the equity jurisdiction and no objection is made to it in this court. It may be doubtful whether if the point had been sharply contested by demurrer below, the equity of the bill could have been maintained. It is true that there is a concurrent jurisdiction of matters of account in law and equity. 1 Story's Eq. Jurisp. 443. But it is laid down that where all the items of the account are on one side and no discovery is asked, there is no equity jurisdiction. 1 Daniells' Ch. Pr. 551; 1 Story's Eq. sec. 459; Fowle v. Lawrason, 5 Peters, 495. It is true that there are a few large items of credits but it is not clear that they would make the account a mutual one in the sense in which it is understood in equity. However this may be, we think it our duty to proceed to consider the cause on the merits under the rule laid down by this court in Reynolds v. Watkins, 9 C. C. A. 273, and McConnell v. Provident Savings Life Assurance Society, 69 Fed. Rep. 113. In those cases we held, following the decisions of the Supreme Court, that where a case with no trace in it of a ground for equitable jurisdiction of it came before the appellate court, it was the duty of this court to reverse the decree and remand the case to the lower court with instructions to redocket the cause on the law side; but that where the case was of a class of cases usually cognizable in equity but lacking only in some one element necessary to justify that jurisdiction, it was too late for a party who had consented or not objected to the forum below, to urge the objection in this court. We followed in these cases the distinctions shown in the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the following cases: Reynes v. Dumont, 130 U. S. 355; Kelbourne v. Sunderland, 130 U. S. 505; Lewis v. Cocks, 23 Wall. 466; Oelricks v. Spain, 15 Wall. 211. The feature of the complicated account is certainly present in the case at bar and thus it is of a class of cases cognizable in equity and though the fact that the defendant's credit items are not numerous enough to make it strictly a case of mutual accounts, we think it within the rule which requires us to enforce a waiver of the question of equitable jurisdiction against a party objecting for the first time in the appellate court and which a fortiori requires us to maintain the jurisdiction when as in this case no objection is made even here. See also, Waite v. O'Neil, 72 Fed. Rep. 348.

The defenses to this action involve a proper construction of the language of the bonds rather than any conflict about the facts. While in contracts like this the more natural attitude of a "surety" is assumed by the form, it is, in effect, one of insurance, and whatever indefiniteness of language or ambiguity of expression there may be should be resolved most favorably to the assured not only because it is the language of the insurer, but also because the general purpose of the contract is full indemnity, and this should not be defeated except by clear and unambiguous limitations assented to by the parties. Imperial Fire Insurance Co. v. Coos, 151 U. S. 452; Thompson v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 136 U. S. 287, 297; National Bank v. Ins. Co., 95 U. S. 673, 678–'9; Supreme Council, Catholic Knights of America v. Fidelity & Casualty Co., 63 Fed. Rep. 48; Tibbits v. Ins. Co., 73 Fed. Rep. 95, 96; American Credit Indemnity Co. v. Wood, id. 81, 88. And the safe-guarding of this rule against any abuse of its application is nowhere better done than by Mr. Justice Jackson when he says—"But the rule is equally well settled that contracts of insurance, like other contracts, are to be construed according to the sense and meaning of the terms which the parties have used, and if they are clear and unambiguous their terms are to be taken and understood in their plain, ordinary and popular sense."

Imperial Ins. Co. v. Coos, supra.

It is a familiar rule of interpretation that we shall look to the general purpose of the parties to the contract to see what they intend to provide. Waite v. O'Neil, court of appeals, sixth circuit, October term, 1896. The old-fashioned bond to secure fidelity of trust administration being a contract of suretyship, strictly, and not of indemnifying insurance, in the expansion of the modern contrivance of organizing incorporated companies to furnish a guaranty of fidelity, these contracts naturally took the form of a bond, as these do, rather than that of a policy of insurance. But as to this subject-matter of indemnity as well as to the multitude of others formerly covered by bonds to which 131 the principle of insurance is being so comprehensively applied, the general object is that of a protection as broad at least as that afforded by the old-fashioned bond, the form of which has been assumed, and for which the modern contrivance is intended to be a substitute. Marine, fire or life insurance against the destructive forces of nature are not quite the same thing as an insurance against the dangers of dishonesty and the risk being entirely of a different nature, the courts must interpret the contract in view of this difference, applying the words used to the purpose of covering the peculiarities of the risk assumed on the one hand and on the other intended to be discarded or shifted to others. And if these new contracts, whatever their form, are to be turned into contracts of insurance the courts will be careful not to again perplex themselves with regrettable technicalities of law such as have sometimes crept into the older contracts of insurance and have required statutes for their removal. In marine, fire and life insurance it is not an unreasonable assumption that the owner knows more intimately than others can know the conditions which are material to the risk assumed, and it is therefore not unreasonable to require him to disclose those conditions to the insurer and to hold him strictly to that duty. But in an insurance like this the insurer and the insured deal at arm's length with each other and upon a plane of equal opportunity for information. Indeed, the risk does not depend so much on conditions of fact as upon a mere judgment about human character in the subject of the insurance—his individuality of moral qualities. About this the insurer can inform himself and the assured is not presumed to know anything, as in the case of the owner of a property or a life which has been insured. Hence it is not unreasonable to hold the insurer to his risk in the broadest sense that is required to indemnify the assured for any loss by dishonesty which falls fairly within the employment of the person whose honesty is guaranteed, and to permit no escape except by lines of retreat or avenues of deliverance clearly defined, well marked and mutually understood as part of the contract—evidenced by the use of unambiguous language for that purpose. It would be contrary to public policy to inconsiderately allow the protection afforded by this new insurance to the vast business interests of the country, in public administration, as elsewhere, to be endangered by any lesser indemnity than that of the old form, by bond, which is being so rapidly displaced, the new contracts being offered by the companies as superior to the old in safety. The courts should interpret them with a view of accomplishing what the companies propose to secure by adhering strictly to the rule we have quoted in the language of Mr. Justice Jackson. And we wish further to remark that the business honesty or fidelity insured by such contracts as these is not that kind of enforced honesty which comes of a want of opportunity to be dishonest, but that which is to be sturdy enough to operate for safety, spite of opportunity and temptation. That is the only kind of insurance worth the premium paid by the assured or which is a fair consideration for the risk of loss which he opens under the pro-132 tection of the guaranty, and, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, presumably that which is bargained for in each instance. A kind of honesty which will not take advantage of lapses of watchfulness to construct deceitful appearances adjusted to familiar traits or habits of carelessness on the part of the employer, perhaps indulged because of reliance upon the insurance which has been accepted as a protection. An employer would need no insurance against that close and relentless vigilance which makes stealing impossible, and under these contracts he is bound to no watchfulness except that which he has contracted to use, in plain words, for the benefit of the insurer.

The old form of bond and security was usually without covenants for watchfulness or inspection by the employer, or other obligee, and as that is the highest measure of liability of which the business is capable it is that which the obligee would naturally seek for his protection, always desiring presumably to provide by some such guaranty even against his own negligence and careless business habits. The nature of the risk forbids the idea of any implied or general limitations upon the guaranty against loss by dishonesty, and, in our judgment, these contracts are not to be construed as imposing any by mere inference of an understanding between the parties that the business will be conducted with either ordinary or any degree of diligence or prudence as to watchfulness. The insurer gets what he contracts for in respect of that and nothing more and he must provide by express stipulation for even ordinary prudence on the part of the assured in taking measures for minimizing or lessening the broad risk we have indicated as that most desirable to the assured, and, therefore, that which is intended to be covered by the words of insurance in these contracts; except so far as the "provisos and conditions hereinafter contained" shall have limited that broad liability. Nothing is to be implied not necessarily indicated by the words used, as might be in other examples of insurance where the relation of the parties and the character of the risk are different and where those relations properly breed implications that would import a meaning not admissible when the thing guaranteed is so far disassociated from any duty owing by the assured to the insurer as we find in the subject-matter of insurance here.

Coming now to a critical examination of these contracts we find that one of them provides "that the employer shall observe or cause to be observed all due and customary supervision over the said employé for the prevention of default." The other that "the said employer shall use all due and customary diligence in the supervision of said employé for the prevention of default," etc. Much proof was taken to show what kind of supervision is ordinarily and prudently taken by other banks and generally in the banking business to prevent default, it being assumed that there was a contract here for that kind of supervision, or at least that which ordinary prudence in any business would require. Certainly these words may mean that but not necessarily. They may mean less;
133 for example, they may mean that "due and customary supervision" which obtained in this particular bank, not over all employés but over the teller, not over all its business in every direction, but only over that which he did. It may mean that which was in vogue when the contract was made or that coming subsequently into use as affording a better mode of detection. If that supervision which it was customary for the authorities of this bank to keep over the teller was careless and ineffective for detection it would be none the less "due and customary" and that which they took "to prevent default." The point is argued here as if this were a contract for effective supervision; indeed, as if it were a sort of guaranty by the assured that the insurer should not suffer loss because he would take care of him by that kind of effective supervision which would be sure to prevent it, thus reversing the real relation of the parties. And we are told in the proof and in the argument how readily the default could have been detected if other supervision had been given than that which was made. After the fact we can see how easily these frauds could have been prevented if those who were the victims had suspected Schardt and had watched him and his books instead of relying on his honesty and these policies guaranteeing it.

But all this is beside the question, which is, whether the words of the contract required any other supervision than such as was given. The words of either of the bonds we have quoted are ambiguous and may embrace any degree or acts of supervision from the highest and most certainly effective to those which are least so, as long as they were "customary" or "due." The standard of excellence or efficiency is not definitely mentioned nor is any rule of custom definitely prescribed whether of this bank or of all banks, or of any business in which cashiers and tellers are employed. By the rule we have laid down the defendant company should have been more specific in defining the supervision they required, and the contract should have added, if that was the intention, all due and customary supervision in use in the best-managed banks or generally in use by banks conducted with ordinary prudence and skill, or some words sufficiently designating the general custom now sought to be relied on—if there were at that time any such general custom prevailing in the management of banks; not words applicable to any prudent supervision in many differing ways, but those pointing out a custom of supervision in the particular way now insisted upon. We might rest the point here, but there are facts in the case which indicate quite satisfactorily what was meant by these words.

The defendant company in its preliminary investigations undertook by examination with written questions and answers to inform itself of the "custom" of this bank in regard to frequency of inspections and it was fully informed by the answers of that "custom." It is, in our opinion, in accordance with familiar, general rules of technical interpretation to read these words by the light of that fact and to hold that this was the "due and customary" diligence in supervision referred to in these bonds and provided for by the contracts; and by the particular rule we have already 134 announced if any more diligent or other customary supervision was embraced it should have been specified by apt words showing that intention. Courts may acquaint themselves with the persons and circumstances that are the subjects of the written agreement and place themselves in the situation of the parties who made the contract, view the circumstances as they viewed them, "so as to judge of the meaning of the words and of the correct application of the language to the thing described." Goddard v. Foster, 17 Wall. 123, 143. Here on the face of this policy the parties were making these particular inquiries and answers a part of the contract and presumptively they were referring to these particulars in the phraseology to which naturally they might be applied. "When we have satisfied ourselves," says Mr. Justice Miller, "that the policy is susceptible of a reasonable construction on its face, without the necessity of resorting to extrinsic aid, we have at the same time established that usage or custom cannot be resorted to for that purpose."

Again—"An express contract of the parties is always admissible to supersede, or vary, or control a usage or custom, for the latter may always be waived at the will of the parties. But a written and express contract cannot be controlled or varied or contradicted by a usage or custom, for that would not only be to admit parol evidence to control, vary or contradict written contracts, but it would be to allow mere presumptions and implications, properly arising in the absence of positive expressions of intention, to control, vary or contradict the most formal and deliberate written declarations of the parties." Insurance Co. v. Wright, 1 Wall. 456, 470. Here as there, the argument made goes upon the assumption that all that was indicated by these questions and answers and which fixes, ascertains or suggests the kind of supervision in contemplation, is nugatory, and that the whole field is open and the power placed in the hands of one of the parties to dictate the extent of supervision by some other custom, more efficient to have prevented this loss. We think this cannot be done.

Precisely the same consideration disposes of the alleged misrepresentation founded on the use of the words "examined" and "verified" as contained in the certificate made previously to the renewal of the teller's bond that his books and accounts as teller had been "examined and found correct" and upon like words as stated in the proposal or statement made on application for the cashier's bond when Schardt was promoted to that employment. As before the argument proceeds upon the same assumption that an ordinary, prudent and careful examination would have developed the stealings that Schardt had covered up. This may or may not be so, for we know that such defaulters are very expert in covering up by false entries and appearances and often none but the most expert examinations and examiners discover the frauds and we must in looking at these certificates take the appearances as then existing and not as now uncovered after the discovery by such experts. The defendant company was competent to pursue such an investigation. It had a manager or agent 135 at Nashville for the purpose of keeping up and procuring information and was yet contented to rely for reasons we will presently suggest upon these vague and indefinite representations as to that which was done. Now that it appears that the accounts concealed a fraud which close scrutiny behind their face would have developed we are asked to imply that these words were used to represent that such a close scrutiny had been made in fact, which representation it is argued must have been false, because the frauds were not discovered. This is substantially construing the contract as a guaranty to the defendant company against the bank's carelessness in making the examinations or that of its agents. However careless the examination may have been, if made in good faith and the examiners believed the accounts correct they might truthfully so represent them albeit they were not correct. The position of the defendant company leaves no margin here and holds the bank to absolute truthfulness, not of the fact of examination made in good faith and a belief in correctness but of the soundness of Schardt's entries and accounts and their freedom from fraud, no matter how skillfully a fraud may have been concealed by him. The facts do not show any such intentional representation and the words do not define such a complete assurance. The words "correct" and "verified" may mean that but also less in any degree. One "verifies" an account by merely adding up or doing the other work of mathematical calculation and finding the figures correct or by such comparison of entries and items as one may make and find "correct" and any extent of this is "examination" however superficial. These representations do not say that the examination was skillful or extensive or by comparison of books and trial balances but only that such examination as was made disclosed no error or fraud, and if this was done in good faith, as there is no doubt it was, it fully meets the representations made unless we are to imply that the parties intended such a thorough examination as would save the insurer harmless, and this, we think, was not contracted for in plain and unambiguous language, as it might have been, if intended. As was remarked by the learned judge at the circuit, "So long as the bank officers and the committee acted in good faith, such examination as the appointed committee thought proper and sufficient for the protection of the bank and its stockholders would satisfy the requirements of this contract as made," and we may add would be truthfully within these representations. And "if anything more was wanted it was a matter for specific agreement."

It is to be observed that the inquiries made by the defendant company did not explore the book-keeping processes of the bank nor inquire as to the method employed in the bank and yet the defendant urges persistently that any departure from the method in use and any carelessness in book-keeping whereby Schardt was enabled to conceal his frauds is conclusive evidence that the examination and supervision stipulated for was not that which was due and customary, which is to say again that with proper supervision stealing is impossible, and which must come at last to mean 136 that the defendant company did not, in fact, assure anything.

It is also said that Schardt, as part of his scheme to defraud, had ordered certain trial balances to be discontinued and that they were not taken as they ought to have been and that by a comparison of different books and original entries and trial balances the frauds were afterwards and might have been before discerned. It is a sufficient answer to all this to say that these contracts did not specifically bind the bank to this efficient book-keeping, and that it is the common plan of these defaulters to adjust the book-keeping to the service of their concealment—it is the kind of fraud insured against. Schardt had authority or usurped it to order this discontinuance of trial balances and it was as much a method of his stealing as the false entries or the putting of the money in his pocket and in itself was an act of spoliation like the rest. If it had been the policy of the bank to rely on this vigilance as its sole protection it would need no bonds or insurance; and if it had been the policy of the insuring company to protect itself by that eternal vigilance in book-keeping which is the price of safety it could easily have stipulated for it as a condition of its insurance not by drag-net generalities to catch any misprisions but by determinate regulation. It did not do this. And there is a reason for it. If these new companies engaging in this new line of insurance should insist on perfect protection against loss and demand a stringent, efficient and unceasing vigilance that would make these frauds next to impossible they could do no business and there is no reason why they should exist or why any one should pay premiums for such limited risks. Business would prefer the old style of bonds which ask no questions and give a broader indemnity. Hence these solicitors for the new insurance use these vague, indefinite, ambiguous and—tested by the implications now demanded—misleading words and phrases that customers may not be deterred by too much visible limitation on the risk; and thus they become what Mr. Circuit Judge Lacombe in one of the cases we have cited quoting from the books calls "a snare for the unwary." The law does not tolerate the spreading of the net nor help it to enmesh its victims.

If we were to concede that the officials of this bank could not have failed by ordinary prudence to have discovered these frauds or that without some negligence the losses could have occurred, it would not follow from this that this company, which has guaranteed to the bank and its stockholders the fidelity of the teller and cashier, can escape its liability because of such negligence. It has not limited its risk to one arising only when the bank officials act without negligence. If it wishes to do that it should use apt words in its policy and say so in plain and unambiguous terms, and then its customers would know that they were paying for insurances against losses that could not occur, for "due and customary" diligence in the sense of the argument we are considering means that kind which always brings discovery the moment the stealing begins. We hold that the proof shows, in respect of this, that all was done which the contract stipu-137 lated should be done and possibly more, since the policy only stipulated for "an inspection or audit" to be made "at least once in twelve months," and those stipulated to be customary in this bank were made quarterly, as the insurer was informed; possibly the one enlarges the other, but that point is immaterial since the greater number of inspections includes the less, and either is thus satisfied.

A separate defense is made on the teller's bond that it limits the risk to a loss sustained "and discovered during the continuance of the currency of this bond and within six months from the employé ceasing to be in the said service." By manifest misprision of counsel there is here a misquotation by the insertion of the words "of the currency" after "continuance." Whatever the force of this misprision may be, as the bond is written it plainly covers any discovery within the next ensuing six months after Schardt had ceased to be teller, provided of course the default occurred while the bond was current. The liability on the bond would cover only such thefts as occurred while he was teller under the bond and when he quit that employment the "said service" would cease. No other service can be meant or applicable to the contract except a service as teller under the bond. If the twelve months of the bond expire and the teller continue in the employment of teller, without a renewal of the bond from this company, yet, in contemplation of this contract "said service" has ceased, for it means that service which has been insured by this bond and its renewals and no other service either as teller or otherwise. That ceases whenever the bond ceases. This relieves the absurdities suggested in the argument based on the misquotation of the bond and a misconception that the discovery must be made while the bond is current; and also prevents the suggested prolongation of the limitation as to time. Whether, if the teller should leave the position of teller so early during the twelve months' duration of the bond that the six months allowed for discovery would expire before the bond itself expired, the time for discovery would, nevertheless, by the terms of the bond continue to the end of the bond, we need not decide. But if he leave so late that the six months' limitation would continue beyond the duration of the bond we have not the least doubt that a discovery made within six months from his actual quitting would be within the limitation.

Schardt was elected cashier January 1, 1893. The teller's bond expired January 16, 1893, and the discovery was made in April, 1893. Whether we count the six months from January 1st, or January 16th, seems immaterial, on any facts we know, for either would be within the limitation by a discovery in April next ensuing. If after his election as cashier he continued to act as teller and fraudulently appropriated any money before January 16th, the defendant company would still be liable but not for any default as teller after that date. The discovery must have been made within six months from the date at the very latest whether he had then quitted the service of teller in fact or not. He had then quitted the service which had been insured, and the bond should read as if it had been written "within six 138 months from the employé's ceasing to be in said service under this bond or its renewals."

Perhaps we should notice that the insuring terms of the bond immediately preceding the above-quoted clause cover defaults "in connection with the duties of said office or position or with any other duties assigned to him by the employer in the said service;" but obviously this does not affect the ruling we have made. It does not enlarge the import of the words "said service" in the limitation clause as we have construed it. Whether he acts as "teller" strictly so called or is assigned to "other duties," no matter what, they being all covered by the bond are within the service under the bond and any acts of any character constitute "said service," but in either clause, as used, these words do not mean the general service as employé at any and all times whatever, but only that general service as an employé of the bank in any kind of duty assigned to the "teller and collector," during the twelve months covered by the bond—that twelve months of service being the "said service" meant in either of these stipulations. It might be difficult under the terms of the bond to start the running of the six months by any "ceasing of said service," while the employé remained at work in the bank in any capacity, because of the very broad insurance of all duties assigned to him; and possibly all that the defendant company can certainly claim under the words the company itself has chosen to define the limitation for its protection, as applied to the facts of this case, and to them we confine our judgment, is that the six months shall commence not later than the expiration of the bond and they shall be bound for no discoveries after six months from that date. Again it is obvious that under the rules of interpretation we have been applying in this case, that it was the duty of the insured by plain and unambiguous words to have fixed any other limitation it intended than this which is most favorable to the assured on the words that are used, and most consistent with the general purpose both parties had in view, namely, to protect twelve months of the service of Schardt in this bank, giving a reasonable time for terminating that liability by a limitation fixed by the contract and not depending on the ordinary statute of limitations based on public policy, and measuring that limitation of time from the discovery of the frauds and not from the date of their commission and concealment of the fact. On the one hand it might be unreasonable to so construe the words "ceasing to be in said service" as to include a service after the bond had expired, thereby prolonging the limitation on discovery indefinitely in its relation to the termination of the twelve months covered by the bond; and on the other to so construe the words "discovered during the continuance of this bond and within six months from ceasing to be in said service" as including only a discovery within the twelve months, thereby cutting off any possible liability for a fraud committed within the last minute of the duration of the bond or so late as to furnish no time for investigation; but it is an entirely reasonable construction which consistently with the words avoids either of these extremes and fairly 139 requires the assured at the very latest to find the frauds within six months from the termination of the bond. Counsel for the plaintiff denounce these perplexing stipulations as designed to mislead and they are clearly not definite, open and unequivocal as they should be to express a distinct purpose; but we may point to the fact that our construction is analogous to similar provisions in the ordinary contracts of insurance, and conforms to similar stipulations of this very contract giving three months for discovery after cancellation and to one of the cashier's bond terminating the liability within three calendar months from "the expiring of this bond."

The next defense to be considered is that relating to the "bucket-shop speculations" of Schardt as it is designated in argument. It applies to both bonds but in a somewhat different form. The language of the condition in the teller's bond is that of a stipulation to notify the insurer of such conduct and that of the cashier's bond is a representation, or rather the defense is that of the misrepresentation of a fact.

It is somewhat difficult, without displaying all the proof with a commentary on the credibility of the witnesses and their opportunities of knowledge to exhibit the fullest justification of our impression that this defense rests on circumstances comparatively inconsequential, which have become formidable only because of the subsequent developments of Schardt's vast gambling in exchanges called futures, the knowledge of which he concealed from all who were interested, including the agent of the defendant company who was one of the community where these transactions took place and who was there to watch the "habits and associations" of customers of defendant company, like Schardt, but we cannot take the space here to do this and, therefore, forego it. There is no proof that Schardt ever confessed to speculation or gambling except that of Sykes who is somewhat discredited because he has a litigation with the bank, and an apparent animosity toward it. He is also quite indefinite as to time and circumstances and does not impress us with the certainty of his recollection although he uses the language of positive statement. He may confuse what Schardt did admit with what he thus testifies as to his admissions. All the witnesses were speaking about long past circumstances which evidently did not make a serious impression commensurate with that importance which these circumstances now assume in the light of Schardt's defalcations. Sykes recommended him to be cashier in succession to himself and asked for renewals of his bond and evidently, if he be an honest man, these admissions and circumstances did not affect his own belief in Schardt's freedom from serious objection in this employment. There is not the least evidence of any bad faith on the part of any of these officers of the bank, including Sykes, the old cashier, in not making a disclosure of what was known but only of bad judgment in not being more considerably affected by their information.

It may be conceded that it was negligence on the part of the officials of this bank when they first heard of what they did hear and knew what they did know not to investigate Schardt's 140 books and accounts with the most rigid scrutiny; and not to have immediately discharged him, unless such an investigation should justify his retention, may have made them and the bank liable to those of their customers who suffered by him; and that to be a broker for those who speculate and gamble even in so small a way as Schardt confessed that he was a broker, or to be a partner of such a broker, or to be interested in a "bucket shop" if we please, in any way as a broker or customer, is for all bank employés a discrediting "habit and association." We agree to all that is said about this in the cases cited, Preston v. Prather, 137 U. S. 604; Prather v. Kearn, 29 Fed. Rep. 498; Scott v. Chester Valley Nat. Bank, 72 Pa. 479. But this defendant company had not contracted for such a guaranty against negligence as had the depositors and bailees who sustained an action of damages in those cases, and this suggested analogy is neither a legal nor a fair test of the contract duty of the bank to its insurer against Schardt's dishonesty in the premises. Here again it must be strictly limited to the words it has used in defining that duty and none is owed beyond the words by any kind of implications energized by any indignation at the negligence of the bank in not protecting itself, or indignation at the immoral conduct of Schardt. This insurer was insuring the bank for its protection in just such emergencies and against just such negligence, unless the words of this policy speak to the contrary, and had received the consideration for it, while the depositors of the bank, in the cases cited, had contracted for either common prudence, ordinary vigilance or against gross negligence. It is a reversion of the attitude we have here and it is a perversion of that principle to apply it here.

If Sykes ever told Baxter, the president, that Schardt had admitted in 1892 that he had been speculating in a small way but had stopped it, as the learned judge at the circuit remarks, that was "a past event;" and as by the same story he had stopped it, the president may have thought it in itself unimportant and dismissed it as the cashier, Sykes, himself did. It may have been gross negligence to the depositors of the bank to so treat the information; but as he was not then "engaged in speculation or gambling" (according to the information, but not according to the stupendous fact as we now know it) or was not then "indulging in any disreputable habits or pursuits"—if these words apply to "gambling" habits that before were so fully provided for by the stipulation, which may be doubtful—there was no obligation under the stipulation of the teller's bond to report it to defendant company, whatever may be thought of the obligation to protect the bank in the future by investigating Schardt and discharging him as a duty to depositors, who otherwise might sue for negligence. If that which was told was as Eatherly states it, that Schardt had put $200 in the bucket shop as one of the partners or stockholders, that was not "speculation or gambling" or engaging in it, in a strict construction such as we must make here, but only being the agent of those who were speculating and gambling; it may be considered a "disreputable" habit or pursuit, but however regarded and whether it be broadly and liberally 141 interpreted as "gambling" or not, it was, too, "a past event" when the bank became "aware" of it and the habit had been abandoned—again, according to the information, but not the fact, unfortunately for all concerned.

If, also, that which Sykes tells, was told to Baxter, the president, it is to be now considered in its relation to the representation made preliminary to the cashier's bond. We have an impression that Sykes is mistaken and confuses or enlarges what was known and done after the anonymous letter, but take it as he tells it, and it does not appear that Baxter in bad faith withheld the information. He was answering "to the best of his knowledge and belief" and the warranty is not absolute with such a limitation and cannot be, necessarily. If in good faith he did not believe what he heard to be "unfavorable" because Schardt had ceased to deal in the "bucket-shop" or in like good faith did not "deem it advisable" that the insuring company should make inquiry, surely his answer was true because he is made the judge of what is "unfavorable" or what was "advisable," at least within the limits of what reasonable men might think about it. Moreover, it is to be observed that unlike that which appears in the teller's bond, which we have just considered, no mention is made of "gambling" or "speculation" in this question. It is "habits or associations," past or present, that are called to mind, and we doubt if "dealing in futures" had come to be considered "gambling" in that "plain, ordinary and popular sense" of which Mr. Justice Jackson has spoken in the quotation we have made; so as to bring it within the common thought expressed in "habits and associations," as gambling at cards, for instance, surely would be; or if "speculation" had come to be considered "unfavorable." A bank president surely should know that "dealing in futures" was unfavorable, but non constat that a single dealing, or small and insignificant dealing which had ceased, was "a habit;" or that it was advisable for the insurer to inquire about it if it had ceased, and he was informed it had. If the information he got was as Eatherly described it, going only to show that Schardt had been a partner in the brokerage agency, then what we have said about the other applies with greater force. Possibly a reasonable man might limit this inquiry to such "habits and associations" and "matters" as the moralists ordinarily condemn as involving turpitude, or as disgraceful and opprobrious, and not include the business sin of wasting one's own money in speculative trading, even in a "bucket shop." If the money be one's own and not fiduciary money, as to which there was no information, it is still ordinarily by those not casuists regarded as more excusable than the common games of chance. At all events any indefiniteness or uncertainty of language used is to be resolved in favor of the assured and against the insurer, and certainly this "warranty" whatever force it has leaves the quality of being "unfavorable" or "advisable" to some kind of construction by the mind of him who is answering the question. It is not precisely within the rulings in Insurance Co. v. Gridley, 100 U. S. 614, nor National Bank v. Ins. Company, 95 U. S. 673, because it does not depend wholly on the knowledge of the facts, as there, but is a representation as to what has been 142 "heard" by the one answering. Yet, considering the subject-matter, the principle decided is analogous since the respondent is left to exercise his own judgment about what he has heard and there is no warranty that that judgment shall be of the best or an absolutely correct judgment, and that is what we are asked to include within the warranty by this defense.

On the authority of Moulor v. Insurance Company, 111 U. S. 341, and Insurance Company v. Raddin, 120 U. S. 183, the learned judge at the circuit doubted whether under the strict rule this contract should be taken as a warranty but did not decide that point, as we do not, since we find that being treated as a warranty, there has been, when properly construed, no breach of it. Baxter, the president of the bank, had heard what we can now see was unfavorable and that it would have been advisable for the company to inquire about it, but under the then circumstances it cannot be said that he reasonably should have known that it was unfavorable or advisable to make inquiry and this was left to his determination by the contract. This was a limitation on the warranty itself and lessened its scope otherwise. We may add to what the learned trial judge said that under the rulings in Penn. Life Ins. Co. v. Mechanics' Bank, 72 Fed. Rep. 413, the strict rule as to disclosures which have been imported from the marine insurance law and which statutes so often have abrogated as unjust should not be extended to these new policies, and on this ground all the courts have held that the warranties shall be strictly construed, as we do this.

After the anonymous letter was received and Schardt had been called before the bank officials, and denying the charge that he had been speculating, had produced witnesses to disprove it, there may have been rumors afloat, as the witnesses testify, perhaps all traceable to that source, but there was no duty on the bank to run down this kind of information or to report it. It had not assumed the business of a detective agency by the contract. It was held in American Surety Company v. Pauly, 72 Fed. Rep. 470, 476, under a policy similar to this, but under another clause, which is also found in this, requiring notice in writing of any act which may involve a loss coming to the knowledge of the employer, that "knowledge" and "suspicion" are not synonymous terms, that the bond does not call for notice of suspicions but only of a knowledge of some specific fraudulent or dishonest act. The same rule is applicable to the disclosure required under the clause we have in hand so far as it calls for "knowledge" and to the clause in the teller's bond requiring notice on "becoming aware" of speculation and gambling. Mere rumors and suspicions are not included certainly in the teller's bond, and, for the reasons we have indicated, we think not in the other, although it is broader in requiring notice of things "heard" as well as things known. It is not everything heard that is required to be told but only unfavorable habits and associations or matters important enough for inquiry. We have already stated why these are not included and the proof shows nothing more formid-143 able than what we considered in that connection. In the case of the Supreme Council Catholic Knights v. Fidelity & Casualty Co. before cited, 63 Fed. Rep. 48, 57, the contract could not be affected by loose parol statements or concealment of facts, about which no inquiry was made, or by conduct upon which no reliance was placed, but only by misrepresentation or fraudulent concealment provided against as a part of the agreement. Everywhere this rule is found, that it is open to the insurer to be specific and therefore mere entrapping generalities will not be tolerated.

Objection is made to an item included in the report of the expert bank examiners on which the decree was rendered, of $5,992.35 of "overdrafts allowed and not authorized." It is insisted that this was not embezzlement or larceny. We do not know whether it was or not. It might be, because embezzlement or larceny may be committed through the process of overdrafts. This questions was not made by exceptions or passed on in the circuit court and was, it is said by counsel, only brought to attention there at the time the decree was entered. It is evidently an afterthought and there being no proof showing the facts in relation to the overdrafts nor why they were by the examiners included, neither the trial court nor this court can say they were not embezzlements or larcenies. There is no proof to sustain this objection, which comes too late.

Neither do we see any objection to the interest allowed. It is urged that it does not appear that the bank could have made six per cent. on the lost money if it had not been stolen, since it did not discover the thefts until 1893 and that the only basis for adding interest is to make good the loss of the use of the money in the meantime. This is a mistaken view of the law of interest. The Tennessee Code allows interest on bonds. Tenn. Code (M. & V. ed.) sec. 2702. If a policy of insurance be not included in this statutory allowance when it takes the form of a bond as this does, it may be allowed by the jury or the chancellor as "damages" for money detained. Here the defendant company agreed to make good the loss sustained by the fraudulent acts of the employé and if Schardt had been sued the jury or chancellor could have allowed interest against him as part of the damages or "loss" and this the defendant company assured. Interest should be allowed from the date of embezzlements, or from the end of each year, if the jury or the chancellor choose, as he did here, to the filing of the proof of loss, up to the penalty of the bond but not beyond it of course. Then on this amount there could be no interest for three months since that sum is not due by the terms of the contract until three months after filing proof of loss. But if not then paid it bears interest as a debt due from that date, if allowed by the jury or chancellor, when not given by statute. We think it should be allowed in this case whether given by statute or not. Being allowed, it should be calculated to the date of the decree as in other cases. It will be so allowed here.

On the whole we are satisfied with the decree of the circuit court and with the reasons given for it as found in the record and reported sub nomine, Mechanics' Savings Bank v. Guarantee Company, 68 Fed. Rep. 459, and it will be affirmed.

144 And afterwards, on the same day, the following decree was entered in said court, which reads as follows:

In the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

vs.
J. J. PRYOR, Assignee of Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co.

Appeal from the circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee.

This cause came on to be heard on the transcript of the record from the circuit court of the United States for the middle district of Tennessee and was argued by counsel. On consideration whereof it is now here ordered, adjudged, and decreed by this court that the decree of the said circuit court in this cause be, and the same is hereby, affirmed with costs.

And afterwards, on October 28th, 1896, the following motion was filed:

In the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

vs.
J. J. PRYOR, Assignee of Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co.

The Guarantee Company of North America respectfully moves the honorable court to grant an order extending the time for the filing of a petition to rehear and for the issuance of a mandate to the United States circuit court for the middle district of Tennessee for sixty days from the time of the filing of the opinion in this case, to wit, October 5, 1896, for the reason that its counsel, who reside at a distance from Cincinnati, have not had an opportunity to inspect the opinion of the court. Immediately on the filing 145 of the opinion they telegraphed the clerk to secure a copy thereof, but the opinion was then and has since remained in the hands of the printer, to be printed, in accordance with the rules of this court, and a copy thereof will not be furnished to its counsel a sufficient time before the expiration of thirty days from the time of its filing to enable them to inspect the same and take action in regard thereto.

Respectfully submitted.

GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA,
By GRANBERY & MARKS, Solicitors.

And afterwards, to wit, on the same day, the following order was made on said motion, which reads and is in the words and figures following, to wit:

In the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

vs.
J. J. PRYOR, Assignee of Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co.

Upon motion of the appellants, the time within which to file a petition for rehearing is hereby extended 30 days from the day upon which the printed copy of the opinion of this court is deposited in the clerk's office.

And afterwards, on May 27th, 1897, the following petition for rehearing was filed:

146 United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit.

THE GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA, Appellant,
v.
MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST CO., for Use, etc., Appellee.
No. 349.

Petition to Rehear.

To the honorable the judges of the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth judicial circuit:

The Guarantee Company of North America, the appellant in the above-entitled cause, presents this, its petition for a rehearing of the matters involved, upon the following grounds:

1. The court failed to notice the stipulation of counsel touching the error in printing the teller's bond, and places counsel in the attitude of having misquoted the bond in a material respect. The argument was based upon the words "of the currency," after "continuance," which, the opinion states, is a misquotation, while the stipulation showed the record was wrong, and not counsel.

2. The court, in holding that the knowledge of the bank touching the speculation of the bonded employé was not sufficient to make the representation to the company bad faith, confused
147 facts and circumstances ascertained after the representation was made, with what had been learned before; and discredited the evidence of Sykes by attributing to him acts of which he was entirely innocent.

3. The court charges the default of "overdrafts allowed and not authorized" to appellant as larceny or embezzlement, because appellant did not show that such overdrafts were not larceny or embezzlement; while appellee did not show they did constitute larceny or embezzlement.

Petitioner respectfully requests the court to grant it a rehearing, and, if not allowed otherwise, to permit oral argument, upon a day to be named by your honors.

And petitioner respectfully submits herewith a brief on the points mentioned above.

WM. L. GRANBERY, Of Counsel.

I certify that in my opinion the foregoing petition for rehearing is well founded.

WM. L. GRANBERY, Of Counsel.

Misprision of Counsel.

In the opinion handed down by the court it is twice stated that the language of the teller's bond was misquoted by appellant's counsel in a material point. It is said that counsel has inserted the words "of the currency" after "continuance" (page 14).

When the brief for appellee was filed, it was discovered, for the first time, by appellant's counsel, that the teller's bond had not been correctly printed in the record, the words "of the currency," after "continuance," being omitted. Thereupon, when the case was heard by the court, stipulation was made by counsel showing this fact, and the attention of the court was directed thereto. Evidently this agreement of counsel escaped the attention of the court in the consideration of this case, and has subjected counsel to the criticism of having misquoted the bond in a material respect.

It would be difficult to explain how such an error could have been made by counsel, especially in view of the fact that the argument upon this point was directed to and based upon the particular words which the opinion of the court states were inserted by misprision. In order that the attention of the court may be directed particularly to this point, the statement of the clerk of the United States circuit court for the middle district of Tennessee is herewith filed, which shows that the contract in suit was correctly quoted by appellant's counsel, and that the printed record was and is erroneous.

The court is respectfully requested to correct its opinion upon this point, so as to relieve counsel of the supposed error and consequent embarrassment, even though the court should be of opinion that the additional words do not affect the decision of the court upon this point.

149 The statement of the clerk with respect to the other point involves a part of the stipulation of counsel upon the hearing of this cause, and seems not to have been construed by the court in its opinion; and its importance will be noticed in connection with another part of this petition.

II.

Speculation.

Appellant does not presume upon the time of the court to re-argue the questions involved in the representations of the bank officials that the accounts of the employé had been examined and found correct, when the fact was that the accounts were not correct, and had not been examined in a reasonably prudent manner by the bank officials, who were making the representations as an inducement to and as a basis for the securing of the renewal of the teller's bond, and the original issuance of the cashier's bond. While appellant insisted that the contract should be construed so as to mean that reasonably prudent conduct upon the part of the bank officials was contemplated in the dealings between the parties, yet the court having held that a less degree of care upon the part of the officials of this bank would satisfy the requirements of the bond, appellant has nothing further to urge in support of the argument already advanced upon this point, and therefore does not presume upon the indulgence of the court to secure a modification of that holding. But in view of the statements of the court in its opinion with respect to the facts disclosed in the record upon the question of the speculation of the bonded employé, appellant is constrained to file this petition and point out errors of fact which have been made, and which, it is respectfully submitted, changed the whole defense and set up a case to be determined different from that disclosed by the record as understood by appellant.

150 The court gives its unqualified approval to what is said upon the subject of speculation in the cases of Preston v. Prather, 137 U. S., 604; Prather v. Kearn, 29 Fed. Rep., 498; and Scott v. Chester National Bank, 72 Pa., 479.

The holding of the courts in these cases is: "No officer in the bank engaged in stock gambling can be safely trusted, * * * hence any evidence of stock gambling or dangerous outside operations should be visited with immediate dismissal." And in the case first above cited the Supreme Court of the United States held that it was gross negligence in bank officials not to discharge an employé who had confessed to having made a few "deals" on the board of trade, although "past events."

We have, then, the doctrine firmly established, that any employé in a bank, charged with the duty of handling trust funds, who confesses to having made a few "deals" of a speculative character, is unworthy of confidence, and should be immediately dismissed from the service. Thus, the knowledge upon the part of bank officials that one of its employés occupying a responsible position has made a few "deals" in futures, is knowledge that he is unworthy of trust, and should not be permitted to retain his position. It is precisely the same case as if the employé had been abstracting the funds of the bank in a small way, and had been detected by the officials of the bank. It is the same as if the employé had been dissipating or gambling at cards. It is the same as if the employé had done any other thing which deprived him of the confidence of his employer; and certainly a recommendation thereafter of the employee by the employer to any other concern desiring the services of such employé could but be construed by the courts as a breach of good faith, and meriting the condemnation of all fair-minded persons. When an employé has rendered himself unworthy of confidence, and has committed acts which the highest court in the land says should be visited with immediate dismissal from service, and which the 151 same court holds makes it gross negligence not to do so, it does not make any material difference whether that want of confidence, and that imperative duty to dismiss, arise from the commission of any particular incriminatory act; but it is the same whether the act be that of theft, gambling, drunkenness, or speculation, the material point in the matter being that the employé is no longer worthy of confidence, and is not a fit person to be intrusted with the custody of trust funds; and any one suffering such a person to continue in a position of trust is guilty of gross negligence, which can be nothing short of "bad faith."

To all this the opinion of the court seems to fully agree, but the court does not think that the facts in this case sustain the contention that the employé had, to the knowledge of the bank officials, rendered himself unworthy of confidence, tested by the rule announced in the cases above cited. An examination of the record and the opinion of the court will disclose, it is respectfully submitted, that the court has confused the facts known to the officials of the bank at the time the representations were made with certain other facts which were subsequently learned by these officials; and has been unduly affected by the manner in which the facts are brought to the attention of the court by the witnesses.

Trusting that the court may not deem it too tedious an undertaking to again examine the facts in the record upon this point, we will state them as concisely as possible, and confine them strictly to what was known to the officials at the time the representations were made to the appellant, so that we may determine the case upon the question of bad faith upon just such facts as were known to the bank officials at the time of these representations.

The testimony is, that in the summer or fall of 1892 preceding the issuance of the cashier's bond in January, 1893, one Kyle, representing Myers & Co., brokers, in New York, stated to Sykes, 152 the cashier of the bank, that Schardt, the bonded employee, was a part owner in a bucket shop. This information was immediately given to the president of the bank. On the next day this information was imparted to the employee, and he "admitted that he had at one time been interested in such a concern, but had sold his interest; and that he had speculated to some extent, but had made money on every transaction, and had seen the error of his way and had ceased to do so any more." The president of the bank was immediately told of these admissions. (Trans., p. 80.)

Immediately upon the president of the bank receiving this information, directly from the employé himself, in the language of the court, it was gross negligence in him not to immediately discharge the employee; and this duty was as imperative as if the employee had confessed that he had abstracted the funds of the bank intrusted to his care. Under the holding of the courts, no distinction can be made between acts which render an employé unworthy of confidence and which the courts say must be visited with immediate dismissal.

The representation by this president shortly thereafter that this employee was worthy of confidence, cannot but be construed as fraudulent, and, nothing else appearing in the record, it is respectfully submitted that the court cannot unqualifiedly approve the doctrine announced in the cases above cited, and at the same time exonerate this president from having been guilty of bad faith in the representation. And it is submitted that not only are there no circumstances or facts in the record which in the least degree tend to mitigate or soften the conduct of this president in recommending the employee as worthy of confidence, but the circumstances tend to make the bad faith more apparent. A month or so after this information was received and known by this president, he was shown an anonymous letter, which stated that the employee had been speculating, and not only was an investigation not set up, but no inquiry was even made of the employee himself by this president.

153 The court states, in its opinion, that this president may have deemed this information unimportant. It is respectfully submitted that the court might as well say that the bank president may not have deemed any other material act important which rendered the employee unworthy of confidence. It might as well be said that knowledge of theft, gambling at cards or drunkenness might not have been considered unfavorably by this bank president; but can the court assume that anything which the courts hold renders an employee unworthy of confidence, might not be so construed by the president of the bank?

In this particular case the court deals too generously with this president in excusing what the courts hold to be bad faith by assuming what this president declines to testify to. If it be conceded that a bank president may relieve himself of the imputation of bad faith by testifying that while the facts known to him did and should have discredited any employee in the mind of any and all bank presidents, yet can the court set up this excuse for a president who remains silent and who does not attempt to excuse himself? Can it be that the courts will in a case like this make an excuse for a bank president which will relieve him from the imputation of bad faith when he or his principal make no effort to excuse themselves? It is respectfully submitted that in the case of life insurance, where one of the principals to the contract is dead, and cannot offer an excuse for himself, the courts do very properly indulge in presumptions in his favor, but no case can be found in which the courts have indulged this presumption in favor of a party who declines to testify in his own behalf, and offers no excuses for declining to do so.

To say that the matter was overlooked or neglected, or regarded as unimportant by appellee in the preparation of this record, would be a serious reflection upon the ability and zeal of the able counsel who represented appellee, and whose reputation as a lawyer 154 is confined neither to his State nor this judicial circuit.

An examination of the record will disclose the fact that while notice of the defense was set up fully in the answer filed by appellant, and while counsel admits in argument that the defense is a troublesome one, yet not one single question, directly or indirectly, was asked by the able counsel for appellee of any witness, either upon direct or cross examination, with respect to any fact or circumstance which would tend in the least to throw any light upon this question of speculation by the employee, or the knowledge of the officers of the bank with respect thereto. The court comments upon the fact that Sykes may have been mistaken in what Schardt admitted, and may have confused what Schardt said with what he told Baxter, the president, but is it safe for the court to indulge in presumptions to excuse or soften the importance of facts where such eminent counsel dared not question the witnesses? If Sykes was mistaken in what he testified, there was an easy means of showing it. He not only states the facts, but gives the names of the parties by whom the statements may be verified or contradicted. If what he says was told the president was false, it was a very easy matter to disprove it by the president. The record shows that the president was still living and was not called to contradict or vary the statement of Sykes. Kyle was not called to vary or contradict what Sykes testifies was told him. The court says that Sykes, although not contradicted by a witness or circumstance in the record, and although no effort was made to even circumstantially discredit him, he "is nevertheless somewhat discredited because he has litigation with the bank." It is submitted that if Sykes is discredited because he has litigation with the bank, the testimony of Eatherly is all the more discredited because he has a direct personal interest in this litigation, and it is certainly a more discrediting circumstance to have an interest in testifying a particular way than it is to a witness who merely has a litigation with one of the parties, which is not shown to have 155 engendered any bad feeling, and especially in litigation in which no charge of fraud or bad faith is made, as stated by Eatherly. (Trans., p. 70, Q. 150.)

The court refers to the fact that there is no evidence of bad faith upon the part of the bank officials in not reporting the speculation of Schardt, but only bad judgment in not being more considerably affected by that information. It is respectfully submitted that whatever rules may be established for the interpretation of the written contracts of insurance companies, which may differ from the ordinary rules of interpretation of written instruments, certainly there cannot be any different rule governing the testimony of parties in this character of cases from that adopted in all other cases; and, applying the test of what the highest court in the land has said should affect a bank president to the extent of requiring prompt action in discharging an employee guilty of such conduct as the president of this bank is shown to have had with respect to this employee, it is respectfully submitted that the court should not excuse the president from the imputation of bad faith by attributing to him the probability or possibility of merely bad judgment. While the court attributes merely bad judgment to the president in this case, adopting the usual rule that where a witness declines to testify the presumption is that the answers will be unfavorable, it would be more proper to assume that had the president testified in this case, he would not have been able to excuse himself upon the plea of bad judgment. In the absence of his testimony, the court cannot know what other information he may have had upon this subject received from other sources than those disclosed in the record. If Sykes, an inferior officer in the bank, ascertained the facts with respect to this speculation which he gave to the president, may it not be presumed that the president received information from other sources which he did not disclose? May it not be presumed 156 that instead of bad judgment upon the part of the president in not reporting this conduct on the part of Schardt, and in representing him to be worthy of confidence, and representing that he had never heard anything unfavorable concerning him, it was in the exercise of good judgment, since if appellant should decline to become surety for Schardt because he had speculated, the directors of the bank might not desire the services of the president for the same reason? Suppose the deposition of Baxter had been taken either to contradict the testimony of Sykes or to excuse his representation with a plea of bad judgment instead of bad faith, and suppose upon cross-examination he should have admitted that at the same time he was holding Schardt out as worthy of confidence, and was representing that he had never heard of nor known of anything unfavorable as to Schardt, at that particular time he himself was engaged in the same character of deals that Schardt confessed he was guilty of. It is certain that the able counsel of appellee preferred the court to take the statement of Sykes uncontradicted and unexplained, rather than introduce Baxter to contradict or explain for himself. Sykes was sufficiently affected with what he had heard to at once report it to his superior officer and the official head of the institution. By this act he discharged his duty and was powerless to do more. The court is in error, it is respectfully submitted, in saying that thereafter Sykes asked for renewals of the teller's bond. This information was received in the summer or fall of 1892, and the last renewal was requested and secured in January preceding. Again the court is mistaken in saying that Sykes recommended Schardt to be cashier as his successor. The only testimony upon the subject is that of Wm. Porter. He says that he asked Sykes if Schardt had the ability to fill the position—there was no question as to his integrity. (Trans., p. 83.)

The court confuses what occurred after the representation was made and the bond of suretyship procured, with what was known and happened prior thereto. The testimony of Eatherly with 157 respect to what Schardt stated to him did not occur until just prior to February 17, 1893. (Trans., p. 64; Brief of Appellee's Counsel, p. 30.) And even then, when Eatherly told him that if he was speculating he ought to quit that or quit the bank, and Schardt answered that he had sold everything that he had, thus showing that not only did Schardt admit to having speculated to Sykes, but to Eatherly as well. Not only is Sykes not contradicted, but this circumstance strongly corroborates him.

The court refers to the fact that when all this information was received by the bank officials, the speculation was a "past event." It necessarily would be a past event unless the employee should be apprehended by the bank officials in the very act itself. The speculation upon the part of the employee may have ceased that day or the day before. If Schardt had been asked when he had ceased to speculate, he may have stated that it was the day before or the week before, or he may have stated that he had finished the last deal that morning, but certainly there is nothing in this record by which the court can assume that the transactions which Schardt admitted having been engaged in were long past events. Just prior to February 17, 1893, Schardt stated to Eatherly, Judge Woodward, and Baxter that, some months prior thereto, he had been a part owner in this bucket shop. (Trans., p. 64.) The information that Sykes received in the summer or fall previous was that Schardt was then a part owner in such a concern. Schardt, when charged with the fact, claimed that he had sold out. Whether it was the day before, the week before, or month before, was not asked, and cannot now be determined; but certainly the circumstances point to the fact that, while it was a "past event," it was certainly a very recent event. It is submitted that while a construction, which may not be the most natural, may be placed upon language in order to prevent a forfeiture of a contract of insurance when the court is 158 dealing with the written terms of the contract, yet when it comes to a question of fact touching the conduct of the parties in their dealings, involving a question of good faith and fair dealing, certainly the courts should not depart from the rule of considering testimony tested by the ordinary rules of construction governing the weight of testimony in all other classes of cases, and excuse the condemnatory conduct of parties who do not seek to excuse themselves nor offer any extenuating circumstances therefor.

When knowledge of speculation was received by the president of the bank, he should have dismissed the employee, so the courts say; instead, the employee was shortly thereafter promoted from the position of teller to that of cashier, and the bond doubled in amount.

When this information was received, an exhaustive examination of his accounts was an imperative duty, so the courts say, yet the statement of the employee was accepted without verification. If it is gross negligence in the president not to discharge an employee known to have been speculating, as the courts say, must it not be held "bad faith" to recommend him as worthy of confidence? If it be the imperative duty of the bank officials to at once make an exhaustive examination of his accounts upon learning of the employee having made a few "deals," is it not bad faith to represent that his accounts have been examined and found correct, when the bare statement of the employee has been accepted as to the correctness of his accounts?

In Imperial Insurance Company v. County of Coos, 151 U. S., 452, Mr. Justice Jackson declined to limit breaches of the contract to such matters as affected the loss; the case is much stronger where the neglect of the bank was directly responsible for the loss.

In the questions propounded to Baxter by the company, he was asked directly whether he had known or heard of any-159 thing unfavorable, and the answer was "No." A separate question was then asked touching his judgment, and a separate answer obtained. One was a question of knowledge, the other of judgment. Each was separately asked and separately answered.

The only persons connected with the bank whom the record discloses had any knowledge of Schardt's speculation were Eatherly, Woodward, Sykes, and Baxter. Eatherly said that he told Schardt that he must either quit speculating or quit the bank. (Trans., p. 64.) Woodward resigned as director. (Trans., p. 64.) Sykes at once reported the matter to his superior officer, and Baxter recommended him as worthy of confidence. Baxter was the only one who was not considerably affected by the information, and he is not asked to explain why.

If a bank may procure a bond to protect itself against its own negligence, and the court says it may, certainly the surety company may insist upon full and fair information concerning the employee before undertaking the risk, and especially is this true when the court relieves the bank of care and supervision over the employee after the contract is secured.

Whatever may be the relations of the parties after the contract is made, certainly they deal upon an equal footing before the contract is effected; and if negligence is to be permitted after, certainly the surety company may require the utmost good faith in the making of the contract, and it was so held in Moulier v. Insurance Company, 111 U. S., 341.

III.

Overdrafts.

The court, in its opinion, says:

Objection is made to an item included in the report of the expert bank examiners, on which the decree was rendered, of $5,992.35 of "overdrafts allowed and not authorized." It is insisted that this was not embezzlement or larceny. We do not know whether it 160 was or not. It might be, because embezzlement or larceny may be committed through the process of overdrafts. This question was not made by exceptions or passed on in the circuit court, and was, it is said by counsel, only brought to attention there at the time the decree was entered. It is evidently an afterthought, and there being no proof showing the facts in relation to the overdrafts, nor why they were by the examiners included, neither the trial court nor this court can say they were not embezzlements or larcenies. There is no proof to sustain this objection, which comes too late.

If the court refers to the statement of the experts in speaking of a failure of appellant to except to their report, it is respectfully submitted that the court is mistaken in assuming that this report of experts was made under the direction or decrees of the court. They were merely accountants employed by the bank officials to examine the affairs of the bank for their own use, and they were introduced as witnesses to testify to the result of their examination.

It is respectfully submitted that it is incumbent upon the bank to show a loss within the plain and unambiguous language of the contract. The experts could have no competent knowledge of the matter, except the books of the bank. They report overdrafts allowed, but not authorized. Since the court is unable to say that this is "embezzlement or larceny," is it not a failure upon the part of the claimant to make out a case? If the court can look to the statement of counsel, which is outside the record, still there was no exception to make by appellant. All that it could do was to insist that the item should not be allowed. There was no report to file exceptions to, and the statement of counsel that the attention of the trial judge was directed to the point before final decree, is sufficient evidence that the question was not an afterthought, raised in this court for the first time. What else could have been done by appellant's counsel upon the hearing, except to insist that the item should 161 not be allowed? The bond did not undertake to protect the bank against fraud, bad judgment, and all kinds of dishonesty, but only losses sustained which constituted "embezzlement and larceny." When claim is made for a loss it should affirmatively appear that the loss comes within the character of loss contracted against; and not require the company to show that a loss has not been sustained. The expert accountants were not supposed to know what particular defaults were contracted for, and, no doubt, were entirely ignorant of the terms of the contract.

IV.

Requests.

Your petitioner respectfully requests that the court grant it a rehearing, and that oral argument be permitted upon this petition for a rehearing if the court does not see proper to grant the petition otherwise. The importance of the case cannot be overestimated, not so much because of the amount involved in this suit, which, however, is considerably more than $35,000, but because of the great importance the opinion will have, not only upon the business of guarantee companies, but upon the large business interests of the country which will be affected thereby. If the doctrine is to be established that guarantee insurance may be taken as a protection against negligence in the supervision of employés intrusted with the custody of trust funds, and if reasonable restrictions in the examination and supervision of employés may be dispensed with, the result can but be disastrous to those who confide the safe keeping of their property to institutions demanding the services of employés in the care and custody of such property. Any rule of law which permits too great a trust in the honesty of employés must necessarily result in disaster and ruin. Scarcely a day passes that the press of the country does not announce the ruin of some financial institution, directly traceable to an old employé who had the implicit confidence of his 162 employers. It has become a matter of general knowledge that the greatest disasters in this line, as well as the most frequent, are occasioned by trusted employés of long service, and unless proper safeguards and precautions are taken by employers in the supervision of their employés, nothing less than disaster and ruin may be expected, and unless contracts providing for supervision and inspection of accounts are upheld, the business of bonding employés must become simply a matter of speculation, and a race of diligence between claimants to secure the capital invested in such business before the collapse is reached.

If the court does not care to hear a re-argument of the case, and does not deem it proper to grant a rehearing, then appellant respectfully requests the court to certify to the Supreme Court of the United States the important questions involved, in order that the court of last resort may definitely settle the principles which are to govern the insurer and the insured in such cases.

Respectfully submitted.

WILLIAM L. GRANBERY,
Of Counsel for Petitioner.

163 In the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Judicial Circuit.

GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA, Appellant,
vs.
MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST COMPANY, to the Use, etc., Appellee.
No. 349.

I, H. M. Doak, clerk of the United States circuit court for the middle district of Tennessee, hereby certify that the original record in the above-styled cause is on file in my office, and that I have examined the same in connection with the printed record on file in the clerk's office of the United States circuit court of appeals, and find that there in an error in the printed record, on page 12. The printed bond on file in my office reads as follows: "It is hereby agreed that the company shall, within three months after proof satisfactory to the directors, make good and reimburse to the employer such pecuniary loss as the employer shall have sustained by the fraudulent acts of the employé in connection with the duties of his said office or position, or with any other duties assigned to him by the employer in the said service, committed by him and discovered during the continuance of the currency of this bond and within six months from the employé ceasing to be in the said service."

On page 112 of the printed record the following also appears. After the words "Have you known or heard anything unfavorable as to his habits or associations, past or present?" the answer 164 is "No," and then, in a separate paragraph, is the following: "Or of any matters concerning him about which you deem it advisable for the company to make inquiry," to which there is an answer "No." This is the way the original record appears. In the printed record both questions are made into one with just one answer, which was erroneously copied or printed.

H. M. DOAK, Clerk.

165 And afterwards, on July 6th, 1897, an opinion was filed in said court, which reads and is in the words and figures following, to wit:

166 United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit.

THE GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA, Appellant, vs. THE MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST COMPANY, Appellee.	On Petition for Rehearing.

Petition filed May 27, 1897; decided July 6, 1897.

Before Taft and Lurton, circuit judges, and Hammond, district judge.

HAMMOND, district judge, delivered the opinion of the court:

We have carefully considered the petition for rehearing filed by the appellant in this case, which is overruled.

It only presents again for rehearing questions that have been fully and thoroughly considered by the court, and which need no further attention from it. It is only asking for a re-argument of what has already been fully argued and decided.

There is one matter, however, which requires our attention relating to a request by counsel for a correction of the opinion in the matter of the misquotation of the language of the teller's bond in the brief of counsel for the appellant. Of course not the least imputation was intended of improper or unfair misquotation by counsel.

The opinion states that it was "by manifest misprision," which language was deemed sufficient to guard against the possibility of any such imputation. Counsel for the appellee in his brief while treating of this matter, and at the argument, most thoroughly disclaimed any intention of suggesting even such a thing as an improper misquotation by counsel, and the court now directs through profound respect for the sensitiveness of learned counsel on this subject that this memorandum by the court shall be filed as an addendum to the original opinion to go with it into the records and the books. It goes without saying that counsel for the appellants are incapable of any such offense, and, indeed, as now appears by the certificate of the clerk of the court, it was not a misquo-
167 tation at all. The trouble arose from an error in transcribing the record. The bond of the teller in fact contains the precise language as quoted by counsel for the appellant, but in transcribing it into the record in some way the words upon which the controversy turned were left out of the bond as it appeared in the record. It is now stated that there was a stipulation by counsel correcting the error of the record and restoring those words to the bond, but this stipulation was never until now called to the attention of the writer of the opinion. It is not now in the record as it came to his hands. As he recollects the argument it proceeded on the same line of assumption that counsel for the appellant had mistakenly quoted the bond in his brief, but counsel then thought he was correct in his quotation and the matter would be looked into. No further attention being called to it, it passed out of the mind of the writer of the opinion.

But taking the actual language of the bond as it now appears we are of opinion that it should not change the result which we reached and our judgment is the same now as at the time the original opinion was filed upon this point.

Petition overruled.

168 And on the same day, to wit, July 6th, 1897, the following order was entered in said cause in said court as follows:

In the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

vs.
J. J. PRYOR, Assignee of Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co.

Petition for rehearing filed herein is hereby denied.

169 United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

I, Frank O. Loveland, clerk of the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and correct copy of the record and proceedings in the case of The Guarantee Company of North America vs. The Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Co., for the use of James J. Pryor, assignee,

No. 349, October term, 1894, as the same remains upon the files and records of said United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I hereunto subscribe my name and affix the seal of said United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, at the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, this third day of September, 1897.

Seal United States Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit.

F. O. LOVELAND,
Clerk of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit.

Endorsed on cover: Case No. 16,774. U. S. C. C. of appeals, 6th circuit. Term No., 561. The Guarantee Company of North America, petitioner, vs. The Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Company, for the use of J. J. Pryor, assignee. Filed January 8th, 1898.

170 UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, ss:

[Seal of the Supreme Court of the United States.]

The President of the United States of America to the honorable the judges of the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit, Greeting:

Being informed that there is now pending before you a suit in which The Guarantee Company of North America is appellant and The Mechanics' Savings Bank and Trust Company, for the use of J. J. Pryor, assignee, is appellee, which suit was removed into the said circuit court of appeals by virtue of an appeal from the circuit court of the United States for the eastern district of Tennessee, and we being willing for certain reasons that the said cause and the record and proceedings therein should be certified by the said circuit court of appeals and removed into the Supreme Court 171 of the United States, do hereby command you that you send without delay to the said Supreme Court, as aforesaid, the record and proceedings in said cause, so that the said Supreme Court may act thereon as of right and according to law ought to be done.

Witness the Honorable Melville W. Fuller, Chief Justice of the United States, the first day of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ninety-eight.

JAMES H. McKENNEY,
Clerk of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Received this writ this 4th day of March, 1898, and I return the same pursuant to a stipulation of counsel filed this day in my office, at Cincinnati; which stipulation is a follows, viz:

vs.
MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST COMPANY, for the Use of J. J. Pryor, Assignee.

Whereas the above-named plaintiff, at the October term, 1897, of the Supreme Court of the United States, procured from the clerk of the United States circuit court of appeals for the sixth circuit a certified copy of the transcript of record in the above-named cause, and having filed the same in the Supreme Court of the United States, and the Supreme Court of the United States having, on March 1st, 1898, directed that the record and proceedings therein should be certified by the said circuit court of appeals and removed into the Supreme Court of the United States, and a certiorari having been issued to said circuit court of appeals directing that said transcript of the record be certified to the Supreme Court of the United States, as aforesaid:

Now, therefore, it is hereby stipulated by and between the said Guarantee Company of North America and the Mechanics' Savings Bank & Trust Company, for the use of J. J. Pryor, assignee, that the transcript of the record now on file in the Supreme Court of the United States, being No. 561, October term, 1897, may be taken as a return to the writ, instead of the certification anew of said record by the clerk of the circuit court of appeals.

And it is further stipulated that this agreement shall be filed with the clerk of said circuit court of appeals, and that a certified copy of the same be sent up by him to the Supreme Court of the United States with the return to said writ of certiorari.

Nashville, Tenn., March 3rd, 1898.

THE GUARANTEE COMPANY OF NORTH AMERICA,
By WM. L. GRANBERY, Counsel.
THE MECHANICS' SAVINGS BANK & TRUST CO.,
By EDWARD H. EAST, Attorney."

Done at Cincinnati, Ohio, this 4th day of March, 1898.
